

Nixon promises not to sell out Europeans

BRUSSELS (AP) — President Nixon signed a declaration of transatlantic unity today on his way to a Moscow summit meeting and promised he would not sacrifice the interests of the European allies to advance detente.

"In the world in which we live, with the nuclear power that overhangs us, there is no alternative to negotiations," he said later at a luncheon given by Belgium's King Baudouin. "There is no alternative to peace."

But Nixon also reportedly told leaders of 14 alliance states at a closed session that he would maintain U.S. troop strength in Western Europe and would guard against "euphoria" when he meets with Soviet leader Leonid I. Brezhnev for talks beginning Thursday in the Kremlin.

The President also declared that defense and detente are inseparable. White House press secretary Ronald L. Ziegler reported him as saying: "Western cohesion provides the basis for conducting detente in the common interest."

The new NATO declaration was signed in a 15-minute ceremony preceding the lunch at the royal palace. NATO Secretary General Joseph M.A.H. Luns, the only speaker for the short, public ceremony, declared that with the declaration "all our countries are stronger and more secure."

The NATO declaration was the one agreed upon and published in Ottawa last week. It reaffirmed that the alliance is indispensable for the security and defense of America and Western Europe.

France's new president, Valéry Giscard d'Estaing, was absent and sent new Premier Jacques Chirac. It was the first appearance of a French premier at NATO headquarters since President Charles de Gaulle expelled the alliance's military headquarters from France.

"Without the alliance, it is doubtful that detente with the Soviet Union would have begun, and without a continuing strong alliance, it is doubtful if the detente would continue," Nixon said on his arrival Tuesday night in the Belgian capital.

The declaration approved last week at the spring meeting of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization formalizes a pledge that the United States will consult NATO's 14 other members before staking out new policies.

After the signing by Nixon and heads of the other allied governments, the American President was to brief his allies about his Moscow trip at a closed session and then hold individual conferences with West German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt, British Prime Minister Harold Wilson and Italian Premier Mariano Rumor.

Nixon in his arrival remarks said his presence at NATO headquarters between his visits to the Middle East and Moscow "symbolizes the central role that the Atlantic Alliance plays in pursuing our goal of a lasting peace in the world."

The President and Mrs. Nixon remain in Brussels until Thursday, when they fly to the Soviet capital for the third annual meeting between Nixon and Soviet Communist party chief Leonid I. Brezhnev.

The Soviet-American summit is expected to produce a partial ban on underground nuclear weapon tests and an agreement in principle to further restrain fast-moving nuclear arms technology.

But a senior official in the President's party told newsmen during the trip across the Atlantic it was "impossible" for a pact limiting offensive nuclear weapons to emerge from this round of Nixon-Brezhnev talks.

The official said Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger may have to make a later trip to Moscow to keep the momentum going.

Tarzan of Sedalia

Four-year old Douglas Wallace, son of Mr. and Mrs. James Wallace, 1210 East 18th, discovered Wednesday that, with a little help from a tree limb next to his treehouse, he could "fly" like Tarzan. Dennis Whiteman, 6, 1803 South Wagner, waits in the treehouse for his turn on the limb. Douglas and his father built the tree house about six months ago and his mother said that Douglas has played in it almost every day since. She also said that he fell out of it once but wasn't hurt.

Evidence to be released

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House Judiciary Committee has voted to make public most of the evidence it has received in secret impeachment hearings during the past seven weeks.

When the material will be released remains unclear but some members say all evidence relating to the Watergate cover-up, including the committee's versions of White House tapes, could be made public in a few days.

Chairman Peter W. Rodino Jr., D-N.J., who will have the right to edit the material before it is released, said Tuesday he hoped the entire record of more than 7,000 pages would be available for public scrutiny when the committee starts debating proposed articles of impeachment, now scheduled for July 15.

"This is information on which one can make an evaluation," said Rodino. "It should come to the attention of the public."

Ronald L. Ziegler, President Nixon's press secretary, said in Brussels today that Nixon welcomes the committee's decision. "It's about time after weeks of leaks," Ziegler said.

The 22-16 vote came on a motion by Rep. Wayne Owens, D-Utah.

Most of the evidence to be released consist of factual statements bearing on the conduct of President Nixon and his aides without any interpretation or conclusions.

However, it also includes the evidence that led the Watergate grand jury to vote 19 to 0 to name Nixon as an undicted co-conspirator in the Watergate cover-up. And it includes transcripts of presidential conversations far more complete than the edited versions released by the White House.

In other Watergate developments: —Former top Nixon aide John D. Ehrlichman and three others go on trial today in the break-in at the office of Daniel Ellsberg's psychiatrist.

—The Senate Watergate committee is reported ready to release a report written by Vice Chairman Howard H. Baker Jr., R-Tenn., on possible CIA involvement in the Watergate break-in and cover-up.

—A legal consultant to the Watergate committee proposed that Congress limit a president's use of executive privilege and define exactly what he can do in the name of national security.

The House Judiciary Committee resolution excludes from the evidence to be released material relating to the secret bombing of Cambodia that the Defense Department has refused to declassify.

Calley transferred to Kansas prison

COLUMBUS, Ga. (AP) — William L. Calley Jr., his appeal of a My Lai murder conviction lodged with a federal judge, boarded an Army aircraft today for transfer to the military prison at Ft. Leavenworth, Kan.

The 31-year-old former Army lieutenant was dressed in a khaki uniform with no insignia to make the 3½-hour flight.

His local attorney, Kenneth Henson, said "We'll work on two fronts now. He ought to be eligible for parole. It depends on whether the Army counts his time on bail. He should be eligible in four or five months."

U.S. District Court Judge J. Robert Elliott took Calley's appeal under advisement Tuesday after two days of hearings. He said he would "rule in due course."

He denied a motion for bail which Calley's lawyers said was warranted because they said the hearings produced "a high probability of success."

Earlier in the day, the U.S. Supreme Court also denied Calley bail. He had appealed to the high court a 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals decision reversing an Elliott order which granted bail in February.

Calley was scheduled to arrive at Ft. Leavenworth early this afternoon and begin a two-week processing period, during which he will be tested and interviewed to determine his educational background and skills.

An Army spokesman said Calley would also appear before a military assignment board during processing and be given a work assignment. He said the work assignments are constructive programs, such as instructing other inmates in various educational programs, work in data processing systems and other assignments.

A Ft. Leavenworth spokesman said no determination would be made on the type of quarters Calley would be assigned until after his arrival.

Department requests trimmed

More city budget tightening

The City Council tightened its proposed 1974-75 budget by $354,000 Tuesday night to tentatively balance the books between city expenditures and revenue.

City Clerk Ralph Dedrick was directed by the council to calculate the new budgets with all proposed cuts by Thursday to make sure enough has been cut for the city to operate in 1974-75.

Dedrick found an additional $33,000 Tuesday in a cemetery board account which was added to the city's expected revenue, bringing it to approximately $3 million.

The council then re-evaluated its cuts from Monday night and further reduced some departments requests. The sanitation department had a planned new maintenance worker cut as well as new refuse containers. The city will probably not accept any more commercial refuse collections than it presently has, according to Mayor Jerry Jones.

In the sewer department contract, services and capital outlay items left in the budget will be taken out of sewer bond funds. The department will be allowed to hire a new sanitation engineer, but will not hire two new employees.

The street department budget was cut again after losing more than $100,000 in improvements on Monday. Materials and supply allocations were reduced by $40,000 and two other improvement projects were cut by $48,000.

At that point in the meeting, Mayor Jones stressed three avenues the council could take for further reductions:

- ✓ Reduce the scope of projects undertaken.
- ✓ Reduce the size of personnel services.
- ✓ Increase revenue.

"Cutting any of these areas are not attractive, but these are the only choices we have with the money we will bring in," Jones said.

Second Ward Councilman Raymond Bales said he did not think that any city employees should be laid off, but Fourth Ward Councilman Robert Eidson said, "We have then got to at least keep the store up."

Jones then pointed out that cuts in improvements will give some city employees time to do other things which the city requires, but has not had time to do in the past. The council's proposed troubleshooting utility crew, which had been scrapped previously, may enter here, Jones said.

The council continued its cutting in the economic development department by allocating $10,000 (a six-month salary) for an economic developer who would have to share a secretary with other city employees.

Fourth Ward Councilman George Dugan Jr. said he hated to see this department totally abandoned, but the council could not afford the original $35,000 allocation.

The general and administrative department was cut by $60,000 in insurance payments. The original budget had requested payment of a three-year installment which would have saved the city 10 per cent on the premium price. The council will now pay the insurance in one-year installments.

Eidson then offered a plan to cut the fire department budget by an additional $30,000. The plan calls for the city to let bids on the new fire station in January 1975, but construction would not begin until April 1975. Monday night the council cut the new station allocation from $200,000 to $60,000 by delaying construction.

The final cut was an across-the-board $26,000 reduction in the park department's budget. The department's request has been reduced from $250,000 to $100,000 in the two night council sessions.

Tentative figures after all cuts left a contingency account of $72,000 for emergencies.

The council members stressed they needed to have

Committee to release CIA report

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Watergate committee is reported ready to release its vice chairman's secret report on possible CIA involvement on the Watergate break-in and cover-up.

The move came after CIA Director William E. Colby asked Sen. Howard H. Baker Jr., R-Tenn., to make only minor deletions in Baker's 35-page investigative report.

Baker has hinted for months that the report contains significant new information.

But he has maintained silence on its contents while trying to persuade the CIA to declassify the documents on which it is based.

There have been unconfirmed reports from sources close to the Baker investigation that the report may show that presidential adviser John D. Ehrlichman told CIA officials he was acting on President Nixon's orders when he requested CIA officials to provide technical aid to E. Howard Hunt Jr.

Hunt is a former CIA agent. At the time of the break-in he was a member of the White House plumbers and later was convicted in the Watergate break-in.

Hunt asked for disguises, a camera and false ID papers —all of which later were used in the break-in of the office of Daniel Ellsberg's psychiatrist.

Watergate committee Chairman Sam J. Ervin Jr., D-N.C., told reporters Tuesday that one part of the Baker report relevant to the Watergate investigation is the section on the telephone call from Ehrlichman to Gen. Robert Cushman, then the CIA's deputy director.

He did not elaborate, but Baker said he will feel free to talk about it after the committee has acted.

Ervin said, however, that nothing he has seen leads him to believe the CIA was involved in the break-in or the cover-up that followed.

Although the committee plans to file its full and final report Thursday, Ervin said it will not be made public until the jury in the trial of Ehrlichman and others is empaneled and sequestered.

Mayors challenge Nixon commitment

SAN DIEGO, Calif. (AP) — The Democratic-dominated U.S. Conference of Mayors sent President Nixon a challenge today to renew his commitment to the New Federalism by sending more unfettered money to the nation's cities.

The mayors, without debate, adopted a resolution declaring that the promises of the New Federalism haven't yet been fulfilled.

The measure, with companion proposals, calls on the administration and Congress to follow through with acceptable amounts of federal aid for second-step New Federalism programs such as mass transit and housing.

The measure also demands that Congress enforce its pledge to challenge Nixon on future impoundment of appropriated funds for urban programs.

Mayor Henry W. Maier of Milwaukee said he thought the President had undercut the New Federalism by impoundment of urban programs funds Congress appropriated.

"The burglary of the budget is much more serious than the burglary of the Democratic national headquarters," said Maier, president of the newly formed National Conference of Democratic Mayors.

The five-day conference, with about 350 mayors on hand, concludes with today's business session and the expected election of San Francisco's Joseph L. Alioto as the new conference president.

The overriding theme has been that the first step of the New Federalism, general revenue sharing, has been good in concept but that inflation has offset its promise by eating into city budgets.

The mayors are asking for early re-enactment of general revenue sharing, at least a year before the current program expires at the end of 1976.

In private meetings with the mayors, the administration communicated that assurance through Nixon's chief domestic adviser, Kenneth R. Cole Jr.

But of more urgent interest to the mayors is congressional passage, and Nixon approval, of two massive second-step New Federalism programs: The $11.3 billion housing and community development bill and an $18 billion, five-year mass transit program.

Jim Lewis is named to State Fair post

Jim Lewis

Jim Lewis, 103 Helen Circle, formerly executive vice-president of the Klasic Manufacturing Co., is the new Missouri State Fair assistant director and concessions manager, it was announced Wednesday.

Lewis' predecessor in the dual positions, Fair Director Wendell Smith, announced the appointment at a press conference in his office. Smith himself was named permanent director Saturday after serving as acting director for two weeks following the promotion of former Fair Secretary Ron Jones. Jones is now deputy-state director of agriculture.

There were a total of three applicants for the position, Smith said.

Smith explained that Lewis' added title of assistant Fair director was not created through the state reorganization program that takes effect Monday. Rather, Smith said, Jones created the position last year in order to allow Smith to share a portion of his workload.

"Ron felt it was necessary, with the growing scope of the Fair, that the secretary have some back-up help he knows he can rely on at all times," Smith said. "I feel the same way and I have complete trust and faith in Jim."

Lewis' duties, in addition to arranging all concession contracts and related matters, will be to scout other fairs across the country and to be responsible for contracting and supervising special events to be held in the off-season at the Fairgrounds.

This last job, Smith indicated, will be especially significant in view of Jones' earlier statement that increased emphasis will be given in the future to making more money for the state by arranging more and better programs during the off-season.

Commenting on his appointment, Lewis said, "I feel very honored to receive this appointment as assistant director of the Missouri State Fair. Missouri Director of Agriculture James Boillot, Deputy Director Jones and ... Fair Director Smith are all qualified, competent men in their positions, and it will certainly be a pleasure to be associated with them."

"The Missouri State Fair," Lewis continued, "has become one of the best in the country and I look forward to the

McGuire marriage confusing

ELMHURST, Ill. (AP) — After Marianne McGuire weds July 6 she won't have to worry about changing the name on her credit cards or driver's license, and it's not because of a breakthrough on the women's liberation front.

Marianne, 22, is marrying another McGuire, Roger.

Last name introductions shouldn't present a problem for family and friends at the marriage and a banquet to follow, but first name introductions will be something else.

Ten of the 15 persons in the bridal party are named McGuire, and the invited guest list is one McGuire after another.

James E. McGuire and his wife, Rosemary, parents of Marianne, have seven children. James R. McGuire and his wife, Margaret Mary, parents of Roger, have six children.

In addition, there are several duplications of first names across both families.

Roger's brother Kevin and Marianne's brother Kevin are both 19 and members of the bridal party. Roger has a sister who has the same name as his bride, and his bride has a sister with the same name as Roger's mother.

Confusing? "When you begin to get into nieces and nephews, it really gets ridiculous," said James E. McGuire.

He said he enjoyed a few chuckles over mailing wedding invitations which read: "James E. McGuire and James R. McGuire request your presence at the marriage of their children, Marianne Therese and Roger Stephen."

"I'm sure a lot of people thought it was a misprint," he said.

He received the Army's leadership award and was named the St. Louis Post-Dispatch scholar-athlete from Affton High School, where he is also a member of the National Honor Society.

Record crops expected despite estimate reductions

WASHINGTON (AP) — Farmers are not going to produce the huge grain crops predicted earlier by food-conscious Nixon administration officials, but the Agriculture Department thinks wheat and corn harvests still will set records this year.

The USDA said Monday that the corn crop will be down 274 million bushels—about enough to fatten 6 million cattle in feed lots—from earlier forecasts because of extremely wet weather this spring. But the crop, now expected to be 6.4 billion bushels, still would be the largest on record and about 750 million more than last year.

Wheat production this year was trimmed 17 million bushels from earlier estimates, but the crop will still total nearly 2.1 billion, a record, the department's Outlook and Situation Board said in a special report.

But the figures, described by officials as "intended to show directions of likely change" and not scientifically collected from surveys, did not include reappraisals of the big 1974 winter wheat crop now being harvested in the Great Plains where yields are reported below USDA estimates.

A full-dress review of 1974 wheat will be issued next month based on July 1 field indications. Further reductions in wheat harvest estimates may be issued then. New corn estimates based on field surveys will not be ready until Aug. 12.

Meantime, the reduced wheat-corn forecasts were expected to be reflected in higher costs for grain next fall and winter, meaning that livestock producers—currently caught in a profit squeeze—may continue to hold back on expanding output.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Farmers in most areas are finding enough fuel to run tractors and other machines, but supplies of fertilizer and baling wire still are tight, says the Agriculture Department.

The department's Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service said Monday that both gasoline and diesel supplies were adequate in about 97 per cent of all agricultural counties.

"Counties where fuel supplies were considered to be tight are located primarily in the South from North Carolina through Texas and Oklahoma, and in the Midwest," the agency said. "No counties reported the supply situation as acute."

But officials said reports from field offices continue to show fertilizer in short supply, "with nitrogen supplies tight or acute" in about 58 per cent of the counties in 47 states.

Department estimates continue to show over-all supplies of nitrogen 5 per cent short of meeting needs; phosphate 12 per cent; and potash "about adequate" this season.

"On June 30 the fertilizer industry will be relieved of all price commitments made to the Cost of Living Council," the report said. "Some companies have already announced fertilizer price increases ranging from $30 to $75 per ton to become effective on July 1."

The supply of baling wire for hay producers is still cramped severely, with nearly 70 per cent of counties surveyed reporting the situation tight to acute, officials said.

Fourth fire finally brings building down

LaMONTE — An early Wednesday morning fire finally destroyed the old recreation center at 103 South Main here. Arson is listed as the cause of the fire.

LaMonte firefighters were called to the scene at 2:15 a.m. and left about 6:30 a.m.

Fire Chief Gene Smith said that four previous fires, all in less than a year, had reduced the structure to just one wall. All of the fires except the first one — in July last year — were deliberately set, he added.

Firemen worked to prevent Wednesday's fire from spreading to a veterinary clinic less than one foot away from the burning wall, Smith said. The Pettis County Fire Department also assisted.

"We fought it pretty long," Smith said. "The clinic had a burned window and slight water damage. But that was all."

The building will never burn again, Smith said. "We scooped all the rubble and everything to the center and made sure it all burned," he said.

Smith also reported that the fire was only 12 feet away from the Post Office, but that building was never endangered.

Smith said he suspected the fire was set by pranksters and not connected with a fire which caused minor damage to a mobile home here at 7:15 p.m. Friday. Arson also is suspected as the cause of that fire.

Smith said representatives of the state fair marshal's office were in LaMonte Tuesday to investigate the Friday mobile home fire. He said they did not disclose the findings of their investigation.

The fire chief said he would not request the fire marshal's office to investigate the Wednesday morning fire since there was only slight damage to the clinic.

Smith said the building was owned by Mary Tanner of New York City. She had contracted with an airman at Whiteman AFB to demolish the building, Smith said, but the work never was done.

The city had recently written several letters to the airman to proceed with the work, he said.

The building has been vacant for the last four or five years, Smith said.

Library's tax levy will go on ballot

The Pettis County Court Wednesday morning ordered that the proposal for a five-cent levy increase for the Boonslick Regional Library be placed on the Aug. 6 state primary ballot.

The court signed the order after County Clerk Mary Jane Wilson verified that supporters of the proposal had obtained more than the needed number of signatures on petitions to place the proposal before the voters.

Mrs. Wilson said a check of the 434 signatures on the petitions presented the court June 14 showed that 340 were valid. Only 264 signatures supporting the levy increase were needed to put the proposal on the ballot.

Supporters had to obtain signatures from five per cent of the county residents who voted in the last gubernatorial election. A total of 5,264 persons in the library's district in the county voted in the general election in 1972, Mrs. Wilson said.

The five-cent levy hike would bring the total library tax in Pettis County to 15 cents per $100 valuation. Boonslick librarian Richard Parker says the levy is needed because of inflation and to equalize the tax burden for the three counties served by the district: Pettis, Cooper and Benton.

Benton County voters also will go to the polls on Aug. 6 to vote on a five-cent tax increase. A spokesman for the Benton County clerk's office said Wednesday that a check of petitions presented the County Court on June 17 showed that library supporters had obtained "twice as many signatures as they needed."

Rejection for public hospital

(Democrat-Capital Service)

CAMDENTON — Voters in Morgan and Camden Counties Tuesday turned down a tax-based hospital district proposal by 526 votes on a simple majority ballot. The district would have provided a 70-bed hospital at Camdenton at a cost to the voters of no more than 15 cents per $100 valuation.

Camden County Clerk Leo Marler said more than half of the 9,331 registered voters in Camden County and the southern part of Morgan county included in the district turned out for the election. The final result was 2,118 votes in favor of the district and 2,644 against.

The Camdenton hospital would have served 30,000 people in the Lake of the Ozarks area. The area currently has about 15 doctors, but no hospital.

Failure to pass the district proposal, however, cleared the way for a privately-financed hospital at Osage Beach.

Larry Shields, a banker and supporter of the Osage Beach facility, said Tuesday night that he "very definitely" expects plans to continue for the privately-financed hospital.

The hospital will be planned and operated by the American Medical Facilities Corp., St. Louis.

Shields said he is "hopeful of state approval by July 5," and that the final plans will be issued immediately after that approval.

In January, the state Office of Comprehensive Health Planning (OCHP) rejected both the tax-based hospital in Camdenton and the privately-financed hospital on the grounds that the Camdenton hospital was too small and the 90-bed facility planned for Osage Beach was too large.

However, Shields said original plans for the Osage Beach hospital already have been modified and submitted to OCHP.

Shields also said he is hopeful that construction on the Osage Beach facility will begin within six months after state approval.

180-day jail term is ordered for man

BOONVILLE — A Montreal, Mo., man was sentenced to 180 days in the Cooper County jail after he pleaded guilty in Circuit Court here Wednesday morning to a felony charge of possessing marijuana.

Sentenced was Norman Fredericks, 24. The case was moved to Cooper County from Pettis County on a change of venue.

Fredericks originally was charged with selling marijuana to Steve Vanderfelz, an undercover agent for the Sedalia police department, in April last year. The charge was amended to possession of marijuana in Circuit Court Wednesday.

Fredericks was given credit for time spent in the Pettis County jail.

some improvements in the budget, but that inflation had reduced the chance of major new projects.

Most of the improvement projects left in the budget are those which the city is already committed to, including $35,000 for a new community center building, land for the new fire station, Convention Hall remodeling, and culvert work on Brushy Creek at Woodlawn Drive, State Fair Blvd., and 11th and Park.

The council also will recommend the resurfacing of 138 blocks of city streets with hot mix asphalt. "I think we need to continue this project since most people think we are keeping the streets in fairly good shape," Dugan said.

"The people will have to see some improvements with their tax money," Eidson said.

The budget problems this year stem from a rising inflation rate, a lower amount of fiscal carryover from the previous year, and reduced revenues due to such things as the free residential garbage pickup, according to Jones.

Citizens in Cooper County have been paying a 15-cent levy since 1964.

A simple majority is needed for passage in each county.

Conservation agent named in complaint

(Democrat-Capital Service)

KANSAS CITY — A state conservation agent in Warsaw has been named the defendant in a civil rights complaint filed recently in U.S. District Court here.

The complaint, filed by Phillip Dale Henderson, Stilwell, Kan., names Calvin C. Christiansen as defendant. Henderson, a cattle buyer, lists Stilwell as his address although he also maintains a mailing address in Warsaw.

Henderson is seeking $5,000 actual damages and $5,000 punitive damages.

The petition contends that on Feb. 8, 1973, while Henderson was inside the Valley Bar near Warsaw, Christiansen took a file box containing personal papers from Henderson's auto parked outside the bar.

Henderson says that in the file box were papers relating to his state of residence and insurance. Earlier on Feb. 8, Henderson was convicted in Benton County Circuit Court on a charge of driving while his operator's license was suspended.

He contends that the papers were "germane and crucial to the trial on Feb. 8, 1973, and any appeal taken therefrom."

Since then, Henderson has been charged five more times in Benton County with driving while his operator's license was suspended.

Henderson says that Christiansen's alleged actions violate his constitutional right to remain free from illegal searches and seizures, and that the alleged actions deprive Henderson of his property without due process of law.

Henderson says he has demanded that Christiansen return the file box, but Christiansen has refused "all such demands."

In his reply to the complaint, Christiansen denied all the allegations against him.

Airport project given approval by FAA official

The recently-completed $1,222,743.24 expansion and improvement project at the Sedalia Airport was approved Tuesday by an official of the Federal Aviation Administration, airport board chairman Louis R. Hughes Jr., announced Wednesday.

Airport manager Jim Abbas Wednesday said the new 5,000-by-100 feet north-south runway, Visual Approach Slope Indicator (VASI), lighting system for the new runway and a taxi runway, connecting the new runway with the older northeast-southwest landing strip, were all unconditionally approved by the FAA official as "completely satisfactory and operable."

The facilities have been in use for some time, but on a restricted basis due to a few minor discrepancies which have since been satisfactorily corrected, Abbas indicated. The facilities will now be operating on a full-time, unrestricted basis, he said.

Construction of the project began in June, 1972, by the Howard Construction Co.

The project was financed by a $790,000 bond issue and state and federal funds.

'Honor America' day is proclaimed

Mayor Jerry Jones this week proclaimed Thursday, July 4, as a day to "honor America" and called on all citizens, community and religious leaders, labor and management, schools and veterans organizations to recognize the day with appropriate programs and ceremonies.

In the proclamation, Jones said, "... we must never forget that our blessings are not self-perpetuating; they must be earned over and over again by continued devotion to the principles upon which the United States of America was founded. It is fitting that this Independence Day be dedicated to honoring our great country by a massive expression of appreciation for the blessings and strengths of this great democracy."

Trial is started on plumbers

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal judge today began the criminal trial of former White House domestic affairs chief John D. Ehrlichman and three other men accused of illegally attempting to gather psychiatric information about Daniel Ellsberg after the Pentagon Papers leak.

The case stems from the Sept. 3, 1971, break-in at the office of Ellsberg's psychiatrist by the so-called White House plumbers. Ellsberg had leaked the Pentagon Papers to the media.

U.S. District Judge Gerhard A. Gesell has said the question before the jury in the trial will be simple: Did the defendants plot to violate the Fourth Amendment rights of the psychiatrist, Dr. Lewis Fielding of Beverly Hills, Calif.?

The Fourth Amendment of the Constitution prohibits searches by government agents without a properly-issued warrant.

Answering pretrial arguments that the break-in was justified as a special case to preserve national security, Gesell said:

"Whatever accommodation is required between the guarantees of the Fourth Amendment and the conduct of foreign affairs, it cannot justify a casual, ill-defined assignment to White House aides and part-time employees granting them an uncontrolled discretion to select, enter and search the homes and offices of innocent American citizens without a warrant."

Thus, Gesell has ruled out a defense based on the origins and motives of the plumbers, a special White House investigative unit established to plug news leaks.

Nonetheless, the principal defendant still is Ehrlichman, who, in August 1971, approved a covert operation against Fielding "if it is not traceable."

The second defendant is G. Gordon Liddy, 43, the silent man of the Watergate scandals, who is under multiyear jail sentences for the original Watergate break-in and contempt charges for refusal to testify before a grand jury.

The others are Bernard L. Barker, 57, and Eugenio R. Martinez, 51, members of the anti-Castro Cuban community of Miami. According to Dr. Fielding they were spotted by Spanish-speaking cleaning people in his modern office building in downtown Beverly Hills during the early morning hours the day of the break-in.

The burglars found nothing useful.

The four plumbers defendants are charged specifically with plotting the break-in "without legal process, probable cause, search warrant or other lawful authority." The maximum penalty for the single conspiracy indictment is 10 years in prison and a $10,000 fine.

In addition, the 49-year-old Ehrlichman, a successful Seattle lawyer before joining the administration, is charged with one count of lying to the FBI and three counts of making false statements before a federal grand jury. He is liable for 30 years in jail sentences and $50,000 in fines.

Court leaves Detroit busing case hanging

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court left the Detroit school busing case hanging today, the last regularly scheduled decision day of its 1973-74 term.

The court's inaction in the case could mean that a decision will be delayed until next fall when the court's next term opens.

However, the justices are scheduled to meet July 8 to hear arguments in the Watergate tapes dispute. A court spokesman said the justices may issue orders and attend to other routine business then.

A ruling on the issue of cross-district school desegregation, one of the major cases presented to the court during the current term, had been expected today.

In actions handed down today, the court:

—Ruled that prisoners undergoing disciplinary proceedings do not have the right to be represented by lawyers. However, the court said prisoners must be given advance notice of disciplinary hearings with a written statement of the evidence against them.

—Ruled that federal judges may not delegate to magistrates the authority to hold evidentiary hearings on habeas corpus petitions by prisoners seeking release. The 7-to-2 decision restricted the kind of work magistrates may do under a 1969 law designed to relieve the work load of federal courts.

—Dealt a blow to Justice Department efforts to block big bank mergers under antitrust laws. Ruling in cases from Connecticut and Washington state, the court said the government must offer stronger proof that proposed bank mergers would restrict competition than in other cases because bank operations already fall under extensive state and federal regulation.

—Expanded the right to trial by a jury in contempt of court cases.

—Ruled that youths eligible for sentencing under the Youth Corrections Act cannot be sentenced as adults unless a judge specifically finds that a youth would not benefit from treatment under the act.

The Detroit case was brought by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People. NAACP spokesmen described it as the organization's most important school case since the historic one in 1954 which struck down the doctrine of separate but equal schools.

Michigan officials and officials of 43 suburban school districts surrounding Detroit appealed a decision of the U.S. Circuit Court in Cincinnati that the only way to desegregate Detroit city schools was to include the suburbs in the busing plan.

Officials of the Detroit school district, which is approximately 64 per cent black, did not join in the appeal.

The Nixon administration urged the court to strike down the circuit court decision, saying that not enough evidence has been presented to show that a desegregation plan crossing school district lines was necessary.

Damage suit seeks judgment of $405,000

A five-count, $405,000 damage suit was filed in Pettis County Circuit Court Wednesday.

The suit, filed by Howard and Er's Schlemmer, Laddonia, Mo., names the former Klassic Manufacturing Co. of Sedalia and the Coleman Co. of the state of Kansas, as defendants.

The Schlemmers' petition says they purchased a 21-foot Klassic travel trailer on April 7, 1973, from a dealer in Kingdom City. The trailer contained an LP gas furnace manufactured by the Coleman Co.

On May 28, 1973, according to the petition, the Schlemmers were inside the trailer at Danville when Howard Schlemmer attempted to light the furnace when a gas explosion occurred, followed by fire.

Schlemmer says he suffered first and second degree burns over 15 per cent of his body. His wife says she suffered first and second degree burns over 35 per cent of her body. Both say they were left with permanent scarring of their skin.

For his alleged injuries, Howard Schlemmer is seeking $100,000. For her alleged injuries, Mrs. Schlemmer is seeking $250,000. Each also seek $25,000 for loss of each other's services and a total of $5,000 for loss of property inside the travel trailer at the time of the explosion.

Expensive bulbs

The first tulips arrived in Europe from Turkey in the 1500s. By 1634, the Dutch were buying and selling the fashionable flowers in operations similar to those of a stock market. Bulb fanciers have been known to inflate the prices to $10,000 for one bulb.

Power of 'assistant presidents' probed

By LAWRENCE L. KNUTSON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Senate Watergate committee report says some presidential advisers over the last three administrations acquired enough power to become assistant presidents, accountable to no one.

"As assistant presidents, they exercise enormous power — taken in the name of the President but often, it seems, without his acquiescence or even his knowledge," Dr. Arthur Miller, a special consultant, said in the report.

"The Senate does not confirm them, their actions are not judicially reviewable, they invoke executive privilege and refuse to deal with Congress—they, in short, act as a government within a government," Miller told the committee.

Miller's report and recommendations were obtained by The Associated Press from sources close to the committee.

Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

Pernicious anemia needs lifetime care

Dear Dr. Lamb — What is pernicious anemia and what can be done for it? I am 72 and have been doctored for high cholesterol. Have been getting B-12 shots each month. Do I have to continue these shots indefinitely? I did try pills, but they had no effect. Can anything else be done? I'm on a low-cholesterol diet.

Dear Reader — You are talking about two different problems. Your high cholesterol level and pernicious anemia have nothing to do with each other.

Pernicious anemia occurs because of a disorder of the stomach. That may sound strange to you, but your stomach forms a substance called "intrinsic factor." This substance flows with your food into the small intestine. It is used there to enable the B-12 in your diet to be absorbed into the bloodstream. If you don't form intrinsic factor in the stomach, then you won't be able to absorb B-12.

Along with the failure of the stomach to continue to form intrinsic factor, there may be a decrease or absence of normal stomach acid formation. Just why a person's stomach quits forming intrinsic factor isn't known. I rarely occurs before age 55 and becomes more common thereafter. For some reason people with type A blood who are of northern European extraction are more likely to have the problem.

The lack of B-12 affects all of the body cells. It is a very important vitamin. Its main role is in the formation of DNA, the vital chemical in the nucleus of the cells essential to their ability to reproduce. This is why it causes an anemia. Did you know that your body forms three-million new red blood cells every second? This means you need a lot of B-12 to help form all those red blood cells. And, if you don't have it you develop an anemia.

The anemia is only part of the total picture. It shows up early because we need to produce more new red cells than about any other cells in the body. Digestive complaints are very common, too. The cells that line your small intestine are normally replaced every three days. If you don't have B-12 this process is also affected.

The nerve cells are also affected if you don't have enough B-12. This can cause degeneration of important nerve cells you need for function of the muscles in the legs and normal sensation. Mental changes can occur, too. This is why it is so important to correct a B-12 deficiency.

The only satisfactory treatment of real pernicious anemia is with B-12 shots. Some people can use liver shots that contain B-12. And you have to take them indefinitely or for

The report said testimony given to the committee indicates that the office of the president has "swollen to mammoth proportions" and that staff assistance and advice "has been gradually transformed into an instrument of control."

Miller urged a thorough congressional study of the President's executive office.

His report recalled that President Franklin D. Roosevelt issued an order in 1939 making it clear "that presidential assistants would remain in the background, issuing no orders, making no decisions and giving no public statements."

Miller recommended that the Watergate committee include the substance of that order in its proposals for change.

If such legislation were to be adopted, the report said, "assistants to the president would soon cease to be assistant presidents—but they would not be precluded from carrying out the necessary liaison activities."

Mistrust between Soviets, Americans

By WILLIAM L. RYAN
AP Special Correspondent

In this time of détente, the murky mist of mistrust that persists in Soviet-American relations seems to have deepened since last year. It dims the outlook for a result from this week's new summit in Moscow that might mean a genuine sense of security for both sides.

The mistrust has many sources, not the least of which is the constant repetition by Soviet propaganda that real peace is impossible because ideological warfare must go on until "imperialism," meaning the camp led by the United States, has been wholly vanquished. Other sources include Soviet suspicion of American intentions, the recent jolts delivered by the Middle East war and its consequences, the continuing reality of the strategic arms race, the clash of national interests.

President Nixon and General Secretary Leonid I. Brezhnev alike have stakes in a look of success for their Summit III starting Thursday in Moscow. Added to his triumph in the Middle East, a Moscow success for the President would be a welcome antidote to pressures from Watergate. For Brezhnev, it could promise something tangible to show his critics from the policy for which he assumes full responsibility. "To live in peace," declared Brezhnev during the wave of euphoria emanating from Summit II in Washington last year, "we must trust each other, and to trust each other we must know each other better."

But Moscow angrily denounces as intended subversion the West's proposal for free exchange of people and information, and the 35-nation European Security Conference became snagged on that point.

The very genesis of Moscow's "peaceful coexistence" policy gives the West good reason for nagging nagging about Soviet motives. The official Kremlin line is that the détente policy was approved by a meeting in Moscow in June 1969 of leaders of 75 Communist parties from around the world. It was then reaffirmed at the 24th Soviet party congress in 1971. Why détente?

Pravda made that assessment June 5. The Soviet Communist party paper also noted the 1969 meeting had fixed "the main direction of the anti-imperialist struggle" and the ensuing five years proved the effectiveness of the Soviet "peace offensive."

Pravda noted that efforts to make the détente process "irreversible" would be difficult, but held out enticing prospects to Western Communists of a coming collapse of the whole capitalist system, now a favorite Kremlin theme. The press constantly stresses what it calls the "deep all-around crisis of the whole capitalist system" as it dwells on Western economic woes.

Soviet statements strongly suggest that détente is part of tactics and strategy for expanding Communist authority around the world. Right now Moscow is campaigning hard to convince foreign Communists that yet another international meeting is needed to coordinate efforts at this time when "intensification of political and economic instability of capitalism opens unprecedented opportunities."

Hollywood old-timer won't leave rectory

NEW YORK (AP) — Show biz gave one of its inside "love-ins" for a beloved old-timer, the housekeeper-cook of St. Anthony's Roman Catholic rectory in Portsmouth, R.I.

And the housekeeper-cook—onetime Hollywood "Blonde Bombshell" Betty Hutton—kissed show biz friends Monday night and told them she loved them all, then vowed to go back to Portsmouth and her housekeeping duties as soon as possible.

"I'll never leave that place," she said in a glare of spotlights at the Empire State Building's Riverboat Restaurant in white chiffon, feathers and a warm glow from all the kisses of other old-timers.

"I've been offered open-ended contracts," she added. "But this is going to be my life." Told that the Rev. Peter McGuire, who befriended her six months ago, had described her as a marvelous and inventive cook and expressed the hope she would continue in her job at the rectory, Betty said she had no idea of leaving.

"I've found something I can do well, and I intend to keep on doing it," she said. "I have a townful of people who love me. We go boating, we have a wonderful time. It's marvelous."

But when George Jessel came up and started talking about old times, he left Betty practically in tears. And when Eddie Bracken called from Hollywood, and she took the call on-stage, the voice that said "Oh, I'm proud to hear from you," was the voice of the Betty Hutton who bounced through a dozen Hollywood musicals and became the pin-up girl of thousands of World War II GIs.

She told Bracken, "When you stopped making movies with me, things went down the tube." Things had gone far down the tube for Betty Hutton when she ran into Father McGuire and "broken, down and out, without a dime to my name," she accepted his offer of a job in the rectory.

At the Riverboat party, while one entertainer after another paid tribute and the reporters and photographers nearly smothered her, Betty might never have been away. "I hate you," said Patsy Kelly, in slacks and plaid shirt, taking time out from her own Broadway comeback in "Irene."

"You're so beautiful," said Patsy. "You look better than I did 40 years ago. If I can come back, so can you."

Scientists say federal interest in weather studies declined

By FRANK CAREY
AP Science Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Stormy political weather is swirling around the nation's 25-year-old cloud-seeding and related programs aimed at large-scale tampering with the weather.

Scientists say there are promising leads in the quest to enhance rainfall wherever and whenever it's needed — and to "tame" hurricanes, Great Lakes snowstorms, hailstorms and lightning.

But they say the federal budget doesn't provide enough money for faster research. The National Academy of Science, among others, says $50 million annually should come from the U.S. government for weather modification.

The Nixon administration budgeted $19.5 million in fiscal 1973 and reduced this to $15.3 million in fiscal 1974. For the budget period starting July 1, the proposed amount is $15.4 million.

Dr. Ronald Lavoie, director of the division of weather modification for the Commerce Department's National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration (NOAA), put it this way:

"Progress has been slow, but it has to be slow because of the very nature of the problem, including the high variability of natural weather which necessitates repeating experiments many times (to rule out the effects of chance)."

"Money always helps, certainly, but in some cases, progress has been restricted by the need for developing certain instruments ..."

So far, Dr. Lavoie adds, significant successful results have been demonstrated in only two kinds of situations.

One is the ability to clear so-called "cold fog" from airports in wintertime, especially in Midwestern and Western states. This is to be distinguished from the more prevalent "warm fog" which weather modifiers have so far found tough to dispel.

The other is the ability to increase the snowpack in mountainous areas of the West by seeding winter storms peculiar to the mountains. This increases springtime run-off to the Colorado and other rivers, which in turn provides increased water for irrigation and for power company reservoirs. Most research for this program was done by the Bureau of Reclamation under Project Skywater.

Lavoie says there is pretty good evidence from studies in the Western United States, Israel and Australia that rainfall from certain other types of winter storms can be enhanced through cloud seeding. This offers an additional potential boon for power company reservoirs.

But he adds that the toughest kind of cloud seeding to evaluate is that designed to increase rain from summer shower clouds — the rainfall farmers and ranchers in the arid Western and Southwestern states depend upon.

Sharp criticism of government policy on weather modification's peaceful applications has come from two sources. The National Advisory Committee on Oceans and Atmosphere (NACOA) and a special panel on weather and climate modification of the prestigious National Academy of Sciences (NAS) have accused the government of penny-pinching, foot-dragging and a lack of central strategy in conducting weather research.

Both groups have urged "stronger and more unified federal programs" and raising annual funding to at least $50 million through 1980.

New research, they say, could identify capabilities and limitations of cloud seeding techniques as well as develop technology for mitigating severe storms.

A key spokesman for both groups, Dr. Thomas Malone of Butler University, Indianapolis, told a House science subcommittee that the government has done little in response to such recommendations.

Malone added: "A new urgency now supports the recommendations that NACOA has made on weather modification. Events of recent months have served to underscore the need to increase worldwide agricultural productivity."

"The importance of (rainfall) augmentation to agricultural output makes a compelling case for definitive experiments to remove any ambiguity over the effects of cloud seeding."

Registration of private vehicles is nothing new. A law in ancient Rome stipulated that all chariots had to be registered.

GM gives a different story to stock market analysts

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — General Motors executives invited 150 stock market analysts to their marble-walled company cafeteria on Fifth Avenue this week and presented an unusually upbeat forecast of things to come.

The company's various problems are now solved or close to being solved, Oscar Lundin, the executive vice president of finance, assured the analysts. Fuel economy, emission problems, safety, deal profits, car size.

This isn't the same type of report a company gives to the government or to buyers when it announces a price increase, as GM has several times in the past few months. But it's what GM likes the analysts to hear. It's understandable.

With charts and graphs and meticulously practiced answers to questions, the executives sought to assure these people, whose opinions influence many investment decisions, that GM was seizing one opportunity after another.

GM's share of the market was rising, to 43.6 per cent of all car sales, said Richard Terrell, also an executive vice president. The gasoline shortage is less critical, and besides, he said, GM was aware of the impending shortfall.

It had, moreover, been prepared for the small-car demand, Terrell said. White letters flashed on a red background: "GM aware of energy situation and trend toward smaller cars several years ago." Some analysts were surprised to hear and read this, remembering those big inventories of larger vehicles.

Buyers will obtain 12 to 13 per cent more mileage per gallon on 1975 models, said Elliott Estes, another executive vice president. Customers will save at least $100 a year on fuel and lower maintenance, he promised.

Fuel economy on rotary engines has been made comparable with piston engine performance, said Estes, even though there is work still to be done on reducing emissions. He promised a sporty subcompact rotary sometime in 1975.

New techniques for reducing weight are being discovered, he said, now that engineers can look at their models in their entirety rather than responding in short lead time to regulatory demands. You would never guess the new cars weigh more.

Thomas Murphy, the vice chairman, spoke about higher sales and lower costs. There are, he said, 10,000 fewer salaried workers at GM now than at the beginning of the year, when there were about 140,000 such employees.

Murphy conceded that the big concern now was with rising material costs, which already have contributed to a $332 increase in GM car prices over a year ago. But there was little time for that; the world was still before GM, the world's largest manufacturing enterprise.

The term "small car" may become a misnomer, Terrell said in response to questions, as he and the other executives, their individual presentations completed, sat smiling at a table before a bare white backdrop. He suggested the term "more efficient cars."

Estes agreed. "These are not stripped down but fully equipped smaller cars," he said, adding that people are asking for power windows on their Vegas, GM's smallest car.

But the fact is, as the GM men pointed out, there is a tremendous profit opportunity today in fattening up those little cars with old-time luxuries, such as air-conditioning, stereo, electric defrosters, vinyl roofs.

After drinks, hors d'oeuvres and filet mignon, the analysts clearly left impressed. They might not have learned anything really new, but they got a taste of the GM style, thoroughness and preparedness.

Residents of city warned

By F. T. MACFEELY
Associated Press Writer

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Warning residents not to travel alone after dark, Jacksonville police pressed the search today for a group calling itself the Black Liberation Army. The group has boasted on tape recordings of two murders in the city.

Jacksonville police and television stations received the second taped message Monday in which the group declared "more white devils will die" unless its demands are carried out.

Two white youths have been slain within a week. Notes left on their bodies and the two sets of tape recordings claim responsibility for the killings in the name of the Black Liberation Army.

Police have said they believe no more than "three to five idiots" are involved in the slayings.

Stephen Lamont Roberts, 17, of Roseville, Mich., was found stabbed to death along an industrial street Saturday and Steven A. Orlando, 18, of Jacksonville Beach was found shot and knifed to death south of that city a week ago.

Investigators said they believe the victims were chosen at random because they were out alone late at night.

"I would advise the public to be aware of the situation and not to put themselves in unlighted or desolate areas after dark," said homicide Sgt. James L. Suber, one of those threatened in the tape recordings. "If you have to go out, try to travel in groups."

Voices on the tape received Monday called Suber a fool and declared, "You will remain foolish until your blood flows in the streets."

The second tape demanded the resignation of the two top men in the Jacksonville sheriff's office.

The tapes said the resignations would delay more executions, but warned that it was the first of many demands.

Evel's 'Sky-Cycle'

Evel Knievel, who has flown his motorcycle over cars, trucks, people and everything else you can think of, shows off a model of his "Sky-Cycle X-2" during a press conference Monday in New York. Seated in the "missile," Knievel will try to fly across the Snake River Canyon in Twin Falls, Idaho, on Sept. 8. He is guaranteed at least $6 million to try to bridge the mile-wide, 1,000-foot-deep canyon. (UPI)

Psychiatrists are winning the battle against obesity

By C.G. McDANIEL
AP Science Writer
CHICAGO (AP) — Psychologists are succeeding where physicians have failed in helping fat people lose weight, a California psychiatrist says.

And, he said, they're doing it without special diets.
Dr. Albert J. Stunkard said that in the past three or four years effectiveness of weight reduction programs has improved 50 per cent through the use of what psychologists call behavior modification or operant conditioning.

Stunkard, chairman of the psychiatry department at Stanford University, told newsmen at the annual meeting of the American Medical Association Monday that the medical profession "has been very backward" in using this new, proven technique to help persons lose weight. He said "psychologists all over the map are doing it."

The psychiatrist, who described the technique at the AMA meeting, said he has been involved with about 130 obese patients at the University of Pennsylvania, where he formerly taught, and at Stanford. Obese patients enrolled in these group therapy programs do not have to go on special diets and are not even told to restrict their food intake at first.

It begins with the patients keeping a diary of when, what and how much they eat and how they feel when they do it. Stunkard said that just keeping records helps patients start losing weight as they become aware of how much they eat.

Patients are advised not to have a lot of food around their homes and to keep away from tempting situations. They are told to eat in just one place in the house.

Persons who eat while watching television, for example, become stimulated to eat in that situation, he said.

Fat persons also tend to eat faster than others, and the physiological signal that they are full is not triggered until after they've overeaten, the psychiatrist said. Therefore, they are advised to put down their knife and fork between bites.

"A lot of obese people are not aware of what they're eating—they don't taste their food," Stunkard said.

On the average, patients lose 1½ pounds a week during the 10 weeks of the group therapy sessions and continue to lose during a period of follow-up and the weight loss is maintained, he reported.

Many become aware from their diaries that they eat when they are anxious or depressed or otherwise disturbed, and when this becomes apparent they develop other ways of coping. Stunkard said.

Ann Landers

'Most brazen pitch' to be surveyed

Dear Ann Landers: You printed a column recently from a lady lawyer who compared the morals of lawyers with those of physicians. It was not a theoretical argument. No doctor had ever made a pass at her, she said, but the lawyer who handled her divorce case propositioned her and she agreed — right in his office on his leather couch.

You were skeptical, but that lady was right. At least 50 per cent of the divorced women of my acquaintance (including my wife) have had pitches from their lawyers — ranging from verbal offers to near rape.

You said poor judgment, weak character, etc. don't belong exclusively to any one profession. I agree. But how about a test? Why don't you ask your readers to drop a postcard with one word on it. The question: "From which profession did you receive the most brazen pitch?" But let's not limit it to doctors and lawyers. The third category should be clergymen. I'll bet lawyers will come in first, clergymen second, and doctors a poor third. — Cynical For A Reason

Dear Cynic: You have a weird circle of acquaintances, but I accept your challenge.

Please, women — no letters with details. Just a one-word postcard naming the profession. I'll report the results after we do a ten-day count.

Dear Ann Landers: I'd like to respond to the widows and divorcees who say they can't find a decent man. I'm sure the complaining females have met several very nice men, but no man stayed around long for the following reasons. As a man who has been divorced for six years and taken out dozens of women, I speak from experience. Here is what I've been running into:

Every divorced girl tells me what a rat her ex-husband was. How he drank, gambled, ignored her, slept around and used like a Persian rug. Not one of the divorced women I took out ever mentioned the possibility that perhaps there was something wrong with HER.

The widow is worse. She wants to have you over to dinner right away. Then out comes the family album with the endless monologue on how wonderful her "Albert" was. What a beautiful person, without a single human flaw. A saint. So generous, so considerate. And of course there are photographs of him all over the place.

Who cares? The answer is NOBODY, and the sooner these divorcees and widows get this through their heads, the better their chances will be for a second marriage. — Also Single And Looking

Dear Single: You've had a run of bum luck, mister. There are plenty of divorcees and widows around who don't fit your description. I hope you find one soon.

Dear Ann Landers: I did a dumb thing and I could kick myself. For my 15th birthday, my grandmother gave me ten dollars so I could go to a doctor and have my ears pierced. Well, last year, my girl friend pierced her own ears with ice cubes and a needle and she offered to do mine for nothing. I let her, and she put the holes too far down.

If I don't wear earrings, will the holes close up? Can I then have my ears pierced by a real doctor? Or will those first holes always be there? — Dumb Doris Dear Doris: A doctor can make the new holes immediately. The old ones will close in time.

Q — Due to the increased amounts of bicycles stolen, both 10-speed and other kinds, is there some way we can have a registration of bikes set up? Under this program, bikes would have to be registered for a small fee and a sticker attached. A bike would have to be registered before it could be ridden on the sidewalk or street. — Mrs. M.J.M.

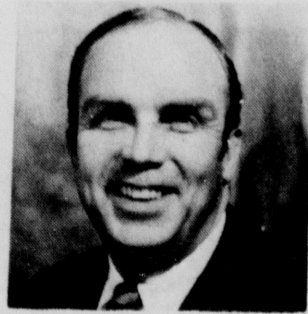

A — Police Chief William Miller told Hot Line that a program similar to the one you suggested was in effect briefly before he joined the police force, but was discontinued for the sake of practicality.

Miller said he could not recommend such an operation "because we're talking about manpower when we talk about a program such as this. We would have to increase our work force." This, Miller added, is something that the city cannot afford to do at this time. In addition, Miller noted, local registration of bicycles would probably not help that much because "most of the bikes stolen, your 3, 5 and 10-speeds, are immediately taken out of town. It's a real racket."

Miller suggested that you copy down the bicycle serial number as a means of future positive identification.

Q — A lot of houses and businesses in Sedalia do not have street or avenue identification numbers on them. For that matter, some streets themselves are not identified. Is this a requirement? — G.D.

A — Postmaster Maurice Hogan told Hot Line that proper identification is required of all businesses and residences desiring mail delivery in the city. Hogan acknowledged that some businesses and residences do not have the required identification but said "our carriers know these residences and we are not going to be so foolish as to stop mail delivery just because the address wasn't present."

By PETER WEAVER

We're paying a lot more for a college education these days — but are we getting our money's worth?

One of the reasons some colleges and universities have to charge more money is because of the massive, non-education overhead they support. All those buildings, all that real estate, all the partially filled dormitories cost money.

A way to save money on college expenses is to find institutions that have cut out most, if not all, of this top-heavy, essentially non-instructive, overhead. There is a growing list of colleges, universities and education services that have eliminated most of the traditional overhead by using community resources such as local professional people as professors, local libraries, laboratories and even local employers (for work-study programs).

Capital Higher Education Service, Hartford, Conn., for example, has no faculty, no classrooms and does not give its own degrees. Dr. Fred O. Pinkham, former president of Ripon College and now president of CHES, says his service acts "as a broker or personal consultant to help students get quality education for careers in the quickest, least expensive manner." CHES charges a $10 registration fee and a $20 consulting fee. Students save considerable time and money in the long run because CHES is able to find

Mind your money

Overhead reason for high cost education institutions which give college credit for past work and life experiences based on competency exams.

Minnesota Metropolitan State College, St. Paul, Minn., has no campus but does give its own degrees. MMSC president, David Sweet, says "the community is our campus, it has plenty of free resources that your taxes have already paid for."

What's the cost of getting a four-year degree from Minnesota Metropolitan? "If you have some past work or study experience," says President Sweet, "you'll probably pay around $800." This four-year degree is approved and backed by the Minnesota State higher education system.

Washington International College in Washington, D.C., designs an education package for each student and draws up a contract which states the student will be raised to a certain level of competency for a specific price. Students work at their own pace and often have full-time or part-time jobs which can also count for credits toward degrees. Most of the instructors are working professionals in the Washington area (government agency attorneys, Congressional staffers, Library of Congress and Smithsonian experts) who work on a one-to-one basis with students. The city is the classroom and laboratory.

Empire State College, Saratoga Springs, a part of State University of New York, has no campus or classrooms either but offers its education through "learning centers" around the state. Students are given credit for past work experience and develop their own "learning contract" to get a tailored education for career needs. Empire State students meet with a "mentor" or tutor every two or three weeks to make a progress report.

The New York State Education Department has a "Regents External Degree Program" which will award degrees to students who pass a series of competency tests. You can live and work anywhere in the country and still get your degree. The cost for a Regents four-year degree ranges from $200 to $700, depending on past study and work experience.

Elsewhere around the country, there are 27 colleges and universities "without walls" that will give degrees for individually tailored study programs. For a pamphlet on "Non-Traditional Education Resources in the U.S.," send a self-addressed, stamped envelope to: Education Testing Service — New Degree Programs, Princeton, N.J. 08540.

Hearing over controls on exposure to chemical

By ROBERT A. DOBKIN
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — A medical study has produced new evidence suggesting a high incidence of death from a rare liver cancer among factory employees working with vinyl chloride, a chemical widely used in the plastics industry.

A study of vinyl chloride workers at the Goodyear plant in Niagara Falls, N.Y., found that three of 24 deaths were due to the cancer angiosarcoma.

Dr. Irving J. Selikoff, director of the Environmental Sciences Laboratory of the Mount Sinai School of Medicine, cited the study. He emphasized the critical importance of reducing the amount of vinyl chloride workers are exposed to, to a "no detectable level" as proposed by the Labor Department.

Selikoff was among dozens of witnesses Tuesday at a hearing on the Labor Department's proposed standards for regulating its use.

Representatives of the Society of the Plastics Industry, Inc., a trade association, argued that the medical evidence was too inconclusive to require banning worker exposure to the chemical. They said the proposed regulations were impossible to achieve and would force the industry to close scores of plants with the loss of as many as 2.2 million jobs.

"The proposed permanent standard is not technologically feasible and, if adopted, would shut down the industry," warned Anton Vittone, president of the B. F. Goodrich Chemical Co.

Vittone, representing the trade association, proposed in prepared testimony a different standard—reducing worker exposure to vinyl chloride from 50 parts per million of air now in force to 10 parts per million, effective October 1977.

But Selikoff argued that "the only prudent course for the prevention of angiosarcoma... is to provide a work environment with no detectable levels of vinyl chloride."

Dr. Marcus M. Key, director of the National Institute for Occupational Safety and Health, said the finding of 19 cases of angiosarcoma—13 in the United States—among vinyl chloride workers between January and May "indicates that we are observing a newly recognized occupational disease associated with exposure" to vinyl chloride.

He said that previously about 20 to 30 cases of the disease had been reported annually in the United States.

United Rubber Workers President Peter Bonmarito, representing the AFL-CIO, said organized labor supported the stringent controls proposed by the government even at the risk of losing jobs.

The only areas in North America where wolves remain in appreciable numbers are Alaska and parts of Canada.

Fighting in China

Violent clashes between opposing political factions have erupted in at least a dozen major cities and provincial areas of China this month, observers say. Wall posters put up in Peking during the past few days claimed some deaths occurred in at least one area, Kiangsi Province in east central China. (UPI)

Mental observation is ordered

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP)—A Missouri woman convicted of trying to kill a terminally ill cancer patient with a drug injection has been ordered to the Vinita, Okla., State Hospital for mental observation.

Mrs. Mary Nell Barnett of Lamar, Mo., took the witness stand in a hearing Tuesday before District Court Judge Charles Owens.

"I have not done what I am accused of. If I wasn't innocent, a year would be nothing. I am not insane," she told the judge.

Judge Owens told Mrs. Barnett, who drew a one-year prison term on the attempted murder conviction, that he was not declaring her insane, but wanted her taken to the mental hospital for observation.

Mrs. Barnett was convicted last April 18 of posing as a nurse at University Hospital here and injecting Mrs. Peggy Hoge with a near fatal dose of methadone. Mrs. Hoge survived the injection but died later of other causes.

An earlier trial on the charge ended in a deadlocked jury.

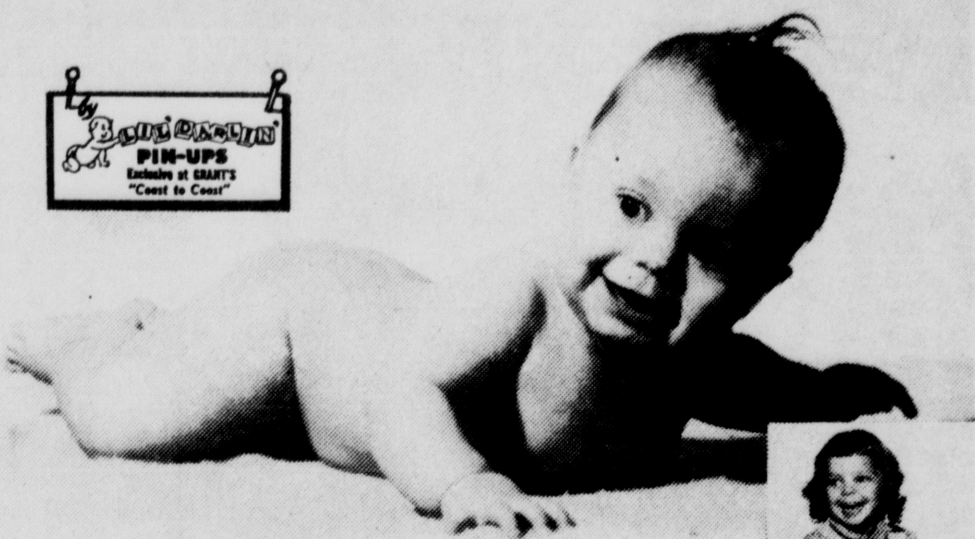

Mrs. Barnett testified at the two trials that she had been having an affair with Bob Hoge, the victim's husband.

Mrs. Barnett was also arraigned Monday on a charge of jumping bond filed after she failed to appear in court for formal sentencing on June 14.

She was discovered in Nevada, Mo. a few days later, where she was hospitalized after taking pills in what police said was an apparent suicide attempt. She was returned to Oklahoma City late Monday.

Computer technology greatest concern

By FRED S. HOFFMAN
AP Military Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Some key Pentagon officials are concerned that sharing certain U.S. technology with Russia under the detente policy could impair national security.

This concern smoldered as President Nixon prepared for his coming Moscow visit, during which new and broadened agreements are expected in furtherance of detente.

Officials are worried mostly about the transfer of critical advanced computer technology, which has military as well as civilian application. The Russians are said to trail the United States in important aspects of this technology.

Also bothering defense officials is the possibility that the Russians might be helped to gain ground in the field of micro-electronics.

So far, officials said, government safeguards are working adequately.

But there have been conflicts among the State, Commerce and Defense departments, which look at the question from differing viewpoints, Pentagon officials said. The State Department is anxious to promote detente, the Commerce Department wants to open up the Russian market for U.S. business, and the Defense Department considers itself the guardian of national security.

"We are not in opposition to detente," said one senior Pentagon official. "But we must pursue detente within the bounds of national security."

In a rare speech, Vice Adm. Vincent de Poix, director of the Defense Intelligence Agency, several weeks ago sounded what he called "a small note of caution."

"Detente is intended to, and certainly does, facilitate technological research and development exchange and contacts through cooperative agreement, the increased availability of credits and relaxed export controls," de Poix said.

"But it is not intended to do so at the expense of our national security. While exchange at the level of basic research poses no problem in this regard, this becomes more uncertain as one moves up the scale of weapons sophistication—whether in R & D (Research and Development), manufacturing or management processes."

In another speech, Robert A. Basil, a top defense research official, complained about "the one-sided nature of certain proposed East-West transactions."

Basil contended that "much of the Soviet interest has been in transferring U.S. technology, with its long-term benefits, to the USSR with little or no interest in transferring useful Soviet technology to the U.S."

Man is killed during search for escapees

ST. LOUIS (AP)—A police detective searching for three escapees from a city hospital prison ward shot and killed a north St. Louis man Tuesday night after the man allegedly pointed a shotgun at him.

The dead man was identified as John Patrick, 59.

Detectives Donald Hardy and William Stevenson said they were confronted by Patrick after they answered an anonymous phone call claiming that the escapees could be found at his home.

Hardy shot Patrick after he refused to drop the shotgun and threatened to shoot them, the detective said.

Patrick was pronounced dead at City Hospital.

The incident occurred following the escape of Bernard Meeks, 23, Ricky Jones, 22, and Eddie Fleming, 23, from the prison ward at Homer G. Phillips Hospital.

Meeks told Sgt. Earl Robertson he was ill, then along with Jones overpowered him when he opened the cell door, police said. The men allegedly beat Robertson with a bedpost before releasing Fleming and escaping from the ward when another deputy opened the door to admit a prisoner.

They took the second deputy's pistol, then fled out a storage room window on the first floor, officials said.

Sheriff Raymond Perich said all three were dressed in hospital clothing and wearing leg irons when they escaped.

Authorities described all three men as dangerous. Meeks was serving a 20-year prison sentence for armed robbery. Fleming had been sentenced to 19 years in prison on burglary and theft convictions and Jones was serving two prison terms totaling 29 years for armed robbery and assault. Meeks and Jones were also facing trial on other charges.

Polly's pointers

Will towel lint attract silverfish?

By POLLY CRAMER

DEAR POLLY — My Pet Peeve is with adults who push their way ahead of children in line at a store or drive-in. I have two small children who often go to the store for me and find this most upsetting. — LOUISE.

DEAR POLLY — I am answering Elaine who wanted to know how to remove built-up soap scum deposits from her washing machine. I recommend one cup vinegar to one gallon hot water. Run this through one half the regular wash cycle, then let stand for about 10 minutes and finish the cycle. For the rinse cycle let the tub fill normally to rinse the vinegar solution away. Some alkaline dissolving detergents also will do the same thing. — WILHELMINA.

DEAR POLLY — A washing machine serviceman suggested putting one cup of vinegar in the machine turned to "Rinse" to wash away any built-up soap scum. I do believe him. My daughter's pediatrician told her to put one cup vinegar in the last diaper rinse to cut all soap scum and this use keeps her machine clean. — MARIE.

DEAR POLLY — Make it easier for your child to shine his own shoes by wrapping the polishing cloth around a blackboard eraser. Fasten it on securely with a rubber band or shoe string to keep the cloth in place. — TERRI.

DEAR POLLY — Before I start my summer canning and freezing I make a chart (to be pasted on the inside of a kitchen cabinet door) that lists the fruits and vegetables I will have. Then as I can or freeze them I write on it the number of cans and packages and the date. As I use these things during the year I cross off a number. In the spring when I clean my freezer if I feel I have not kept a correct inventory I put all the older packages in one section so they will be used first. All packages are dated. I use plastic bread bags as a SECOND wrap for all my freezing packages for added protection. — MRS. W.F.

Polly's problem:

DEAR POLLY — What causes new towels to shed lint even after being washed many times? The lint even sticks to one's skin. My towels were gifts at a wedding shower and bought by different people at different places. I cannot take them back to one store. I have seen silver fish in my apartment and wonder if they could be the cause. — MRS. P.

You will receive a dollar if Polly uses your favorite home-making idea, Pet Peeve, Polly's Problem or solution to a problem. Write Polly in care of this newspaper. (NEA)

These five girls set up a refreshment stand on the south end of the Walnut Hills Country Club course near the sixth hole Monday and Tuesday. They sold iced tea and Kool-Aid for 10 cents and cookies. They said that business was slow Tuesday but Monday they made 79 cents for the day's work. Their parents are all members of the club. When business dropped off the girls decided to take up sunbathing and started drinking up the profits.

Bikini dates to second century B.C.

ATHENS (AP) — An Athenian sociologist claims that the eye boggling bikini dates back to the 2nd century B.C. long before the "daring" knee-revealing swimsuits of the Victorian era.

Mrs. Liza Petridi-Skouzes said that fashion "is nothing but a reflection of economic and erotic factors, climatic conditions, politics and even anarchy." Furthermore, fashion presents nothing new but is more of a repeat play of history.

During the Minoan civilization in Crete from 3000 to 1100 B.C. women went about topless and their dress was far more advanced than today's fashions seen at times in Paris.

Corsettes, as well as garters and any other soft or hard elastic clothing item which help improve the shape of the female body, "are only there to satisfy the fetish of male passions," she stressed.

"Clothing," she stated, "therefore serves nothing else but to cover our narcissism and feeling of pressure as to social etiquette."

"History knocks out cold the contention of fashion designers having imagination, and accuses them of stealing indiscriminately from the near and distant past," she said, and added: "One thing is sure: the ideal of fashion is a kind of hermaphrodite, something between a man and a woman... an anarchy of dress which is a real reflection of a more general crisis in our time."

Talking of "crisis," Mrs. Liza also pointed out the element of political bias that creeps into clothing, and asked, "Indeed, are there not those who have a passion for red, or for combinations of red, white and blue?"

Fight training—positive outlet for aggression

STORRS, Conn. (AP) — "Almost everyone starts a marriage based on fantasy but they have to cope with differences they didn't expect," says a University of Connecticut clinical psychologist who specializes in "fight training."

"The goal of fight training is to set up ground rules and define fighting styles so that couples can harness their aggressiveness and use it for positive purposes," said Donald Mosher, a Gestalt therapist.

Although Mosher says fighting is a healthy and valuable aspect of marriage, "most couples tend to have the same fight a thousand times and differences go unresolved."

To break up the repetitive cycle, Mosher suggests setting up ground rules for "constructive fighting" instead of "ritual fighting."

"Couples should agree not to bring issues out of the past if there is no benefit in thrashing them out. They should agree on sensitive areas that are too delicate to withstand a fight."

"The use of language is important. Profanities are useless if they fail to articulate a point," Mosher said.

The roll call report

House votes funds for Anti-Trust division

(Democrat-Capital Service)
WASHINGTON — Here's how area members of Congress were recorded on major roll call votes June 13 through June 19.

HOUSE
ANTI-TRUST — Passed, 216 for and 185 against, an amendment to increase by $1.85 million the fiscal 1975 appropriation for the Justice Department's Anti-Trust Division.

The amendment was attached to a bill appropriating funds for the departments of Justice and Commerce. The bill was later passed and sent to the Senate. The added money restored funds that the Appropriations Committee had cut from the Administration's budget request. The money will finance the hiring of 83 persons, and the key issue was whether the Anti-Trust Division should be beefed up.

Supporters argued that enforcing anti-trust laws combats inflation because increased competition means lower prices. Rep. John Heinz (R-Pa.) said, "Without vigorous competition we cannot expect prices to come down."
Opponents argued that the Anti-Trust Division cannot fill existing vacancies and, thus, should be denied funds for staff expansion. Some members argued that the way to halt inflation is to stop hiring federal bureaucrats. Rep. Robert Sikes (D-Fla.) said Congress must "keep down the escalation of the costs of government."

Rep. William Randall and Rep. Richard Bolling voted yes.

POSTAL SUBSIDIES — Passed, 277 for and 129 against, a bill to delay the effective date of higher postal rates for newspapers, magazines, books and mail from non-profit organizations.

At present, a government subsidy keeps those rates below actual cost. The subsidies were scheduled to expire in 1977 for newspapers and magazines and in 1982 for non-profit mail. The amendment set back those dates to 1980 and 1988, respectively.

Extending the subsidies is expected to cost $753 million. The bill now goes to conference.

Supporters argued that many marginal publications would go out of business without the subsidies. Rep. James Quillen (R-Tenn.) said we should "encourage the free flow of ideas."

Opponents argued that the bill was special-interest legislation to benefit large publishers, with 25 per cent of the subsidies going to the Wall Street Journal, Reader's Digest and Time magazine. Rep. Howard Robison (R-N.Y.) said the bill "attempts to solve all problems at once, and hangs the taxpayer in the process."

Randall voted yes; Ichord voted no.

SENATE
AM-FM RADIOS — Passed, 44 for and 42 against, a bill to require that all radios selling for more than $15 be equipped to receive both AM and FM signals.

The bill, giving the Federal Communications Commission the authority to enforce the requirement, now goes to the House.

Supporters argued that overcrowding of the AM band requires promoting FM. They said the added cost to consumers would be negligible. Sen. Frank Moss (D-Utah) said the public will benefit "from a flourishing FM service."

Opponents argued that the bill was an encroachment on the consumer's freedom-of-choice. Sen. James McClure (R-Idaho) called it "one of those irritating busybody laws ... an effort to give FM a market it could not earn through free competition."

Sen. Thomas Eagleton voted no. Sen. Stuart Symington did not vote.

VET'S BENEFITS — Rejected, 35 for and 54 against, an amendment to tie veteran's subsistence and educational benefits to cost-of-living rises.

The amendment was offered to a new GI Bill, later passed and sent to conference.

GI benefits now must be voted by Congress. In rejecting the amendment, the Senate voted to continue the present system of requiring Congress to pass on increases.

The Veterans of Foreign Wars favors the present system.

Supporters argued that inflation quickly outstrips benefits approved by Congress and that veterans deserve automatic increases.

Opponents argued that educational costs increase faster than the cost-of-living and, therefore, retaining direct congressional control forces Congress to periodically review the benefits. They said Congress has, in the past few years, responded by increasing GI benefits by 150 per cent while the cost-of-living has risen 48 per cent.

Eagleton voted yes and Symington voted no.

TAX CUTS AND HIKES — Rejected, 45 for and 48 against, a motion to close debate and force a vote on the debt ceiling bill, which some senators want to use as a vehicle for tax-reform proposals.

If the motion has passed, the tax proposals would have been blocked because Senate rules do not permit amendments to bills on which debate has been limited.

A motion to close debate requires a two-thirds majority. The tax amendments call for cutting taxes on low and moderate incomes and eliminating the oil depletion allowance, which would have the effect of raising oil company taxes.

Generally, senators voting to close debate wanted to block those amendments and senators voting against wanted to offer those amendments.

Sponsors of the tax proposals have argued that personal tax cuts will stimulate the economy and oil company tax hikes are justified due to recent oil company profits.

Opponents have argued that personal tax cuts will feed inflation and that oil companies must be encouraged to search for more oil.

The debt ceiling bill was chosen as the vehicle because it must be signed into law by June 30 to permit the federal government to pay its debts and employees.

A "yes" vote was a vote to block the tax proposals.

Eagleton and Symington voted no.

Aubrey Case

Aubrey Case, 1016 West 10th, Saturday night was installed as district governor of District 607 of Rotary International.

The announcement was made following the annual district assembly at Holiday Inn here. Case was introduced as the new district governor by Dr. Ralph Woodward, Fayette, out-going district governor of the group. Case assumes his new duties July 1.

An estimated 60 officers from 30 Rotary Clubs in District 607 attended the meeting here. The assembly is held each year to train in-coming local club officers, it was reported. Case has the responsibility of training club presidents.

Representing the Sedalia Rotary Club at the meeting were the club's new president, William C. Hopkins; Bill Arnold, first vice-president; Larry McRoy, second vice-president; Donald Morton, secretary; and Jack Blackwell, Everett Wood and Walter Savio, directors. Robert Phillips, out-going president, and Rich Johnson, house committee chairman, also attended.

The group decided to hold the annual district conference for all Rotary members in Sedalia next spring. This will be the first time a district conference has been held here in more than 10 years.

'Dead' youth is asking when he can return home

TORRANCE, Calif. (AP) — The 4-year-old boy's heart and breathing had stopped and doctors working to revive him estimated his chances for survival were "no more than one to two in 100."

But on Tuesday, one week after he accidentally shot himself, William Horton asked a Harbor General Hospital nurse, "When can I go home?"

The 25 caliber bullet pierced William's aorta, ripped through his intestines in seven different places and lodged in his back.

Dr. Michael Peter, a senior resident in surgery who helped save the boy, told a news conference that a gunshot wound which penetrates the aorta is usually fatal. The aorta is the artery through which blood flows from the heart into the body.

Peter said the chances of a person surviving the injury "would be certainly no more than one to two in 100 and quite likely much less."

He said William's survival "represented a lot of good luck along with good care."

Peter said William's brain lacked oxygen for about 15 to 20 minutes, possibly "as long as 25 minutes," and this condition for longer than eight minutes can result in permanent brain damage. Children seem to tolerate this condition for longer periods than adults, he said.

"He has responded to questions and his memory is good," Peter said. "We feel certain there is no damage and he should recover completely."

The boy's mother, Beatrice Horton, 36, of Carson, Calif., said of her son's accident, "I'll tell you one thing, I never want to have another gun in my possession like that again."

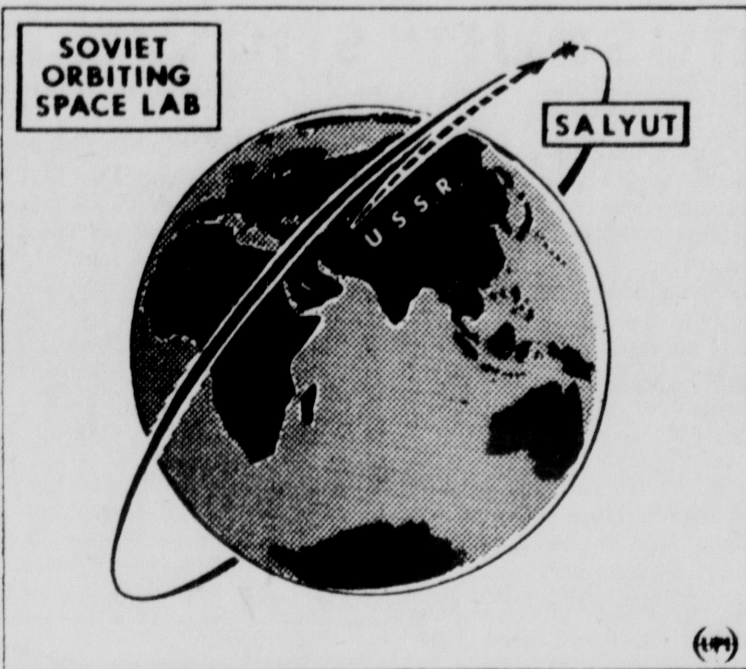

She said she had her automatic handgun in her purse the day of the accident because she was carrying about $500 with which she planned to purchase a minimotorbike for William.

She said she drove into a service station and left the car briefly.

"What he did, apparently, was reach inside my purse and hit the safety and the trigger all at the same time," Mrs. Horton said.

The boy was rushed to the hospital about one mile away, but appeared to be dead, doctors said—there was no heartbeat, no pulse, no spontaneous respiration. William's abdomen had filled with blood.

Doctors stopped the blood flow, administered cardiac massage and William's heartbeat began again. In three hours of surgery, doctors cut out the injured portion of the aorta, sewed the two remaining ends together and then repaired the seven holes in the intestines.

New space station

The USSR sent a Salyut space station into earth orbit Tuesday, setting the stage for a possible manned flight to link up with it during the upcoming visits of President Nixon and nine U.S. astronauts. The Soviets, however, are maintaining complete secrecy about their intentions. (UPI)

Woman fails in bid for post

KANSAS CITY (AP) — The first woman to try for high office in the Communications Workers of America, the 575,000-member union whose membership is 60 per cent female, has failed in her bid.

The 2,500 delegates to this year's convention cast 299,651 representative votes Tuesday for Louis B. Knecht as secretary-treasurer. Clara Allen, CWA New Jersey director, received 160,034.

Earlier Glenn E. Watts of Chevy Chase, Md., was elected to succeed Joseph A. Beirne as president by an overwhelming margin.

Beirne, 63, president of the union and of its predecessor, the National Federation of Telephone Workers, since 1943, is retiring because of ill health and age. Watts and Knecht had Beirne's backing.

For the executive vice president seat vacated by Knecht, the delegates selected George Miller of Washington, D.C. Miller received 236,761 votes to 173,156 for John Renck of New York.

George Werner of New Orleans got 53,062 votes and Willie T. Wright of Virginia 6,367.

NFO denies allegations

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Securities and Exchange Commission has sued the National Farmer Organization, which it contends is broke and lied to its members when it borrowed more than $7 million from them.

The farmers group was charged with fraud, false statements and failure to disclose information about its financial condition.

The suit filed in Des Moines, Iowa, and announced in Washington, came one day after the farm organization's board, in an emergency meeting, unanimously approved a resolution denying any fraud and requesting that the commission make a more thorough investigation.

NFO President Oren Lee Staley has suggested in a news-letter to members that the commission's probe is part of a government effort to ruin the group. Staley pointed out that the NFO was listed among White House "enemies" in Watergate testimony by ousted presidential counsel John W. Dean III.

An SEC spokesman denied on Tuesday that the suit is related to the enemies list. "The charges speak for themselves," he said.

The suit charges that the farm organization is in the red and can't pay its bills.

NFO, which markets a broad range of commodities for its members, has had trouble collecting the $75-a-year dues it asks of its members, and recently launched a drive to collect delinquent dues, estimated by sources close to the farm organization at $12 million or more.

Staley sent a letter to members June 13, marked "confidential for members only—not to be released to the press."

In it, he said the SEC investigation is the biggest problem to confront the farm group in its 18-year history.

"Back dues must be paid immediately or NFO is lost," he said. "NFO's existence depends on your decision."

When news accounts of the letter appeared, Staley denied that the group is faced with financial collapse and said the SEC's complaints were technical.

The suit asks for a court order to prevent the NFO from continuing its allegedly misleading practices, and for a special auditor to determine the NFO's true financial shape.

The group, which reports income of nearly $9 million a year, never has revealed membership figures, but estimates place the number of paid-up members at roughly 160,000 nationwide.

Concert Band to present performance

At 8 p.m. Thursday, the Sedalia Concert Band, under the direction of Lloyd H. Knox, will present its fifth concert of the season at Liberty Park.

Knox said the following selections would be offered: "On the Street," Connell; "Sarasota March," Evans; "Give My Regards to Broadway," Cohan; theme from "The Apartment," Williams and Werle; "Colonel Bogey March," Ford; "More Love to Thee" (hymn), Doane; "Mancini," Henry Mancini; "Thank Heaven for Little Girls," Lerner and Loewe; "In Storm and Sunshine," King.

Following a short intermission, Knox said, the group will continue with "Hostrauser's March," Chambers; "As Long as He Needs Me," from "Oliver," by Bart; theme from "Love-Story," Lai; "Jambalaya," Williams; "Leichensteiner Polka," Lindt; "Sounding Brass," Maxwell.

Candidate has not withdrawn

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — George Gunter Jr., candidate for the Missouri House of Representatives from the 21st District in Kansas City, has not withdrawn from the race for the Democratic nomination.

The secretary of state's office reported Tuesday that Gunter's name had been mistakenly carried on the list of those who had withdrawn as candidates in the August primary.

Armory museum shows knights

By WILLIAM GLASGALL
Associated Press Writer

WORCESTER, Mass. (AP) — More than a hundred shining knights of old stare out in silence every day over central Massachusetts.

But there's no moat surrounding the castle, no massive watchdogs guarding the gate. And some 50,000 persons come to visit the knights each year — at the John Woodman Higgins Armory Museum.

Curator Albert J. Gagne says the museum shows off the glories of the "golden age of armor" — the 1300s to the 1600s — and just in case the passing tourist can't find the museum, all he has to do is look up. There's a suit of armor standing on the roof.

The 43-year-old museum was founded by John W. Higgins, who toured Europe collecting suits of armor while his Worcester Pressed Steel Co. turned out such utilitarian objects as gasoline tanks and Army mess hall trays.

Higgins said once that the museum got started only after "our homes and offices" were overcrowded with the custom-made, shiny suits.

George Gage, the museum's director, says the suits once protected warriors against the fiercest blows — but now are falling victim to a gentler threat, the weather.

He says the suits, some of which go back to Greece of the fourth century B.C., must be cleaned often with the finest steel wool "and elbow grease," then waxed three times to ward off corrosion.

And Gage constantly warns visitors not to touch the armor. "The acid on your fingers eats into the iron," he tells groups of schoolchildren. But the curious kids touch the armor anyway, so Gage has set out a touching table — featuring pieces of armor set aside specially for handling.

Even that doesn't satisfy some people. One eight-year-old girl wrote the museum, "Maybe you can get some armor that people can try on."

Back in the "golden age," according to curator Gagne, servants had a simpler way of rustproofing their master's suits.

They coated them with bear grease.

"You could smell it a mile away," Gagne says.

A $1.5 million endowment from the Higgins' estate has left the museum with few financial worries, says Gage. But he says he's not content with running a museum alone.

"Armor is an art form," he says, "all done by hand." And he intends the age-old craft to continue as he plans for a full armor shop in the museum's basement.

Prolific writer slowing down

By PHIL THOMAS
AP Books Editor

NEW YORK (AP) — For more than half a century Robert Nathan wrote a book almost every year but now at the age of 80 the novelist-poet is "slowing down like the economy."

"My pace these days might be compared to an old engine puffing on a siding," the graying, soft-spoken writer says with a laugh. "I haven't written anything for about a year to speak of, but I'm hopeful a vacation I'm taking on Cape Cod will give me the feeling of wanting to write again."

Nathan, who lived in New York City and on Cape Cod before moving to California some 30 years ago, estimates he's published "some 39 novels

(among them "Portrait of Jennie"), six or seven books of poetry ("Dunkirk"), some plays and a few odd books of other things" since his first novel, "Peter Kindred," appeared in 1919 when he was 25. "Once I had that book done," says Nathan, casual in sports jacket, slacks and loafers, "I was a novelist. Before that I was just a sort of journalist, writing little poems and trying to be a writer."

Earning little from his early books — "usually I just got my advance which was less than $1,000" — Nathan managed to keep on writing because "fortunately I had a father who gave me a small allowance. I also earned a little money as an advertising solicitor. I had one account. He was a friend of my mother's who owned a large painting business and she forced him to give me his business."

His financial picture brightened in 1933 when the novel "One More Spring" came out. "The book became a best-seller," Nathan recalls, "and from then on I was self supporting."

In 1943 he went to Hollywood to write movie scripts. "I started at $2,000 a week," he recalls with a laugh. "Once I even earned $4,000 a week — but that was only for one week. Those were very lavish days when money seemed no object at all. They hired all the writers — anybody and everybody — and paid them enormous salaries."

During this period, Nathan says he turned out a number of movie scripts, "most of which were never produced. They probably are still gathering dust in some obscure studio cabinet." A script he didn't write but would like to have done was the one for his own novel, "Portrait of Jennie."

"The idea in those days," he says, "was not to have an author write the script for his own book because it was believed he couldn't translate it for the screen."

Although he isn't working on anything special at the moment, Nathan says that when he is writing "I write all the time. I'll walk down the street with a notebook and write in it as I stroll, then, when I get back, I insert what I've written in my manuscript."

TV show caused one director mixed reactions

By JAY SHARBUTT
AP Television Writer
NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — The program director of this city's public TV station admits to mixed emotions when the Public Broadcasting Service's new national program "Auction" began last month.

"My first reaction was good, that for the first time local stations were going to have some input into what is going to be seen nationally," said Gaylor Ayers of WDCN-TV here.

"But my second reaction," he laughed, "was close to panic because we started getting a flood of information about the program and this system. And it is extremely complicated."

For Ayers and others like him working for the nation's 151 public TV licensees, the panic is over — until next year — and now they're concentrating on drawing up their 1974-75 program schedules.

All took part in PBS' new "program cooperative" in which stations for the first time had to pay a fair-share portion of 30 to 40 per cent of the national programming they'd gotten free in previous years.

And Ayers, his ordeal over, now has only cheers for the system and thinks "it has a better than even chance of working."

The cooperative came about partly because of dwindling federal and foundation dollars for national public TV programming.

But its basic aim was to stimulate stronger grassroots support for local stations and greater direct involvement by those stations by making them help pay for some of the national shows they propose to air.

To help start it, the Corporation for Public Broadcasting and the Ford Foundation put up $10.5 million in grants to help stations "buy" the cooperative's shows, but to get its share each station had to kick in one dollar for every three it got from the CPB-Ford supply.

At WDCN, one of Nashville's four TV stations, the grant came to $60,191. The required matching sum of $20,064 was easily reached and exceeded, Ayers said, despite initial fears of fiscal woe.

When the station held its annual fund drive in March, he said, "we did get a sizeable increase. We found this time we had fewer big donations, but more medium and small donations."

Why? Ayers said he doesn't really know, "but it strongly suggests our average viewer is increasingly aware he's got to dig down now and really help pay for the shows he or she wants on public TV."

The local take this year, he said, came to $87,000, or 17.8

per cent more than was raised last year for WDCN, whose signal is seen not only here but in 38 predominantly rural surrounding counties.

Though the tomato originated in America, it was not used as food in the New World until long after Europeans had been eating it, the National Geographic Society says. Until about the 1830s United States residents believed the plant was poisonous and grew it only as an ornamental. The mistaken belief probably arose because the tomato belongs to the sometimes deadly nightshade family.

Business news

Stephen Haller, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Haller, 2406 West 11th, recently was promoted to night manager of the Crown Center Hotel in Kansas City.

Haller is a 1969 graduate of Smith-Cotton High School and will graduate from the University of Missouri-Kansas City in August. He is majoring in business administration and hotel and motel management.

High Court upholds right not to print

The temper of the times being what it is, there was more than the usual interest shown by journalists in a case before the U.S. Supreme Court in which a decision was handed down Tuesday.

In a unanimous ruling, the court struck down Florida's 61-year-old law that required a newspaper to print the replies of a political candidate if it "assails" his personal character or charges him with "malfeasance or misfeasance in office or otherwise attacks his official record..."

Suit had been brought by a candidate for the Florida legislature, who had been editorially opposed by the Miami Herald. The newspaper refused to print the candidate's "replies" to its editorials, and suit was filed in circuit court, where the Herald won.

On appeal, however, the Florida Supreme Court, incredibly, upheld the law. Tuesday's decision overturned that ruling.

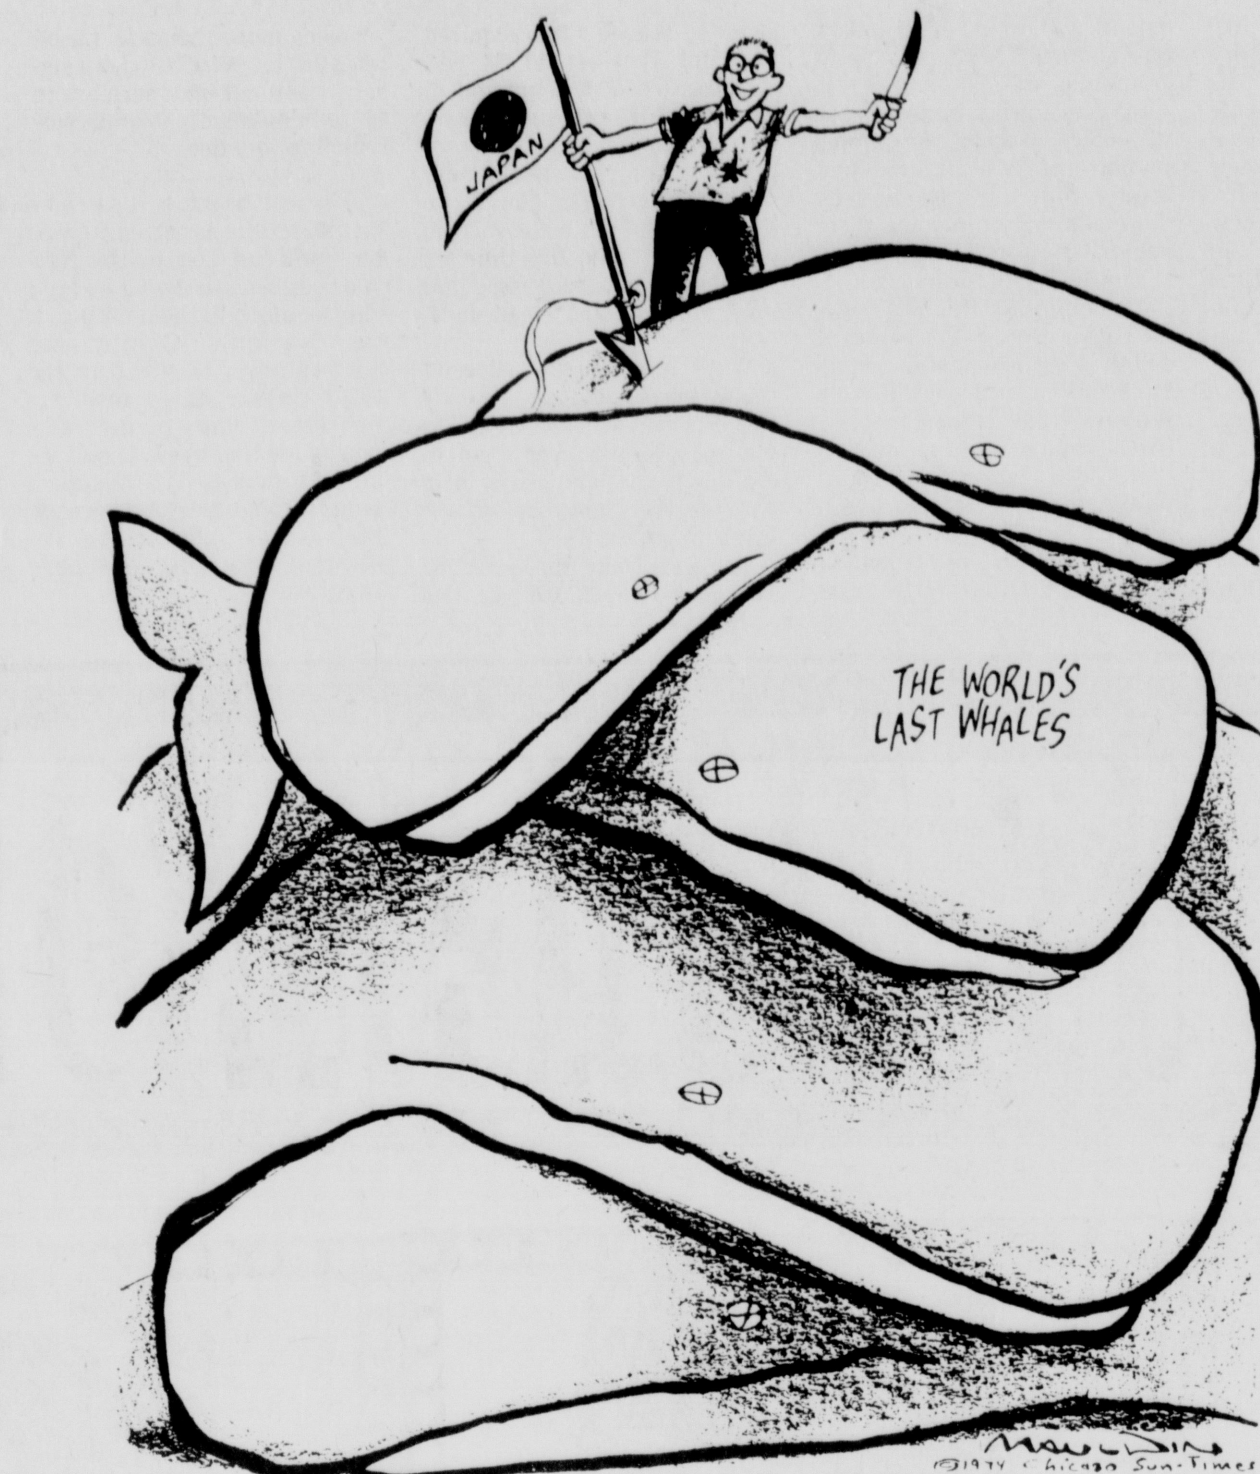

What gave the case prominence beyond its merits was the amount of national attention it received, not the least of which came from President Richard Nixon. In a speech last March, the President called for the adoption of a federal libel law that would include the so-called right to reply.

Sen. John McClellan, D-Ark., also endorsed the idea and suggested that Congress might study such legislation pending the outcome of the Herald case.

The Supreme Court, however, refused to go along. It clearly saw the Florida statute for what it was—an invasion of First Amendment freedom of the press guarantees. Chief Justice Warren E. Burger, in his opinion, stated that there is no difference between telling a newspaper what it must print and what it cannot; both amount to censorship.

Coming as it does from a unanimous court embracing justices of both liberal and conservative stripe, the decision is a resounding one. But the question lingers: how could a president of the United States, at least one senator and a state supreme court take such a diametrically opposed—and distorted—view of the same Constitution?

White House leaks involved Anderson

By JACK ANDERSON

WASHINGTON — The White House howls about news leaks have moved us to relate for the first time how those same horrified gentlemen have tried to use our column to leak unfavorable stories against their political foes.

First, the White House tried to establish a direct pipeline into our office. This was shut down after our exposés of the Nixon Administration landed us on the White House "enemies list."

Thereafter, the President's men used indirect approaches to plant stories with us, once routing information through the Virgin Islands.

Here are the details:

Early in 1969, President Nixon's political tutor, the late Murray Chotiner, called on us to say that the new President wanted friendly relations and that the resources of the White House would be available to us for hard-to-get information.

We don't know whether Nixon himself was a party to this arrangement. But ex-White House aide Clark Mollenhoff has told us that he learned from the President's former staff chief, H. R. Haldeman, of Chotiner's secret relationship with our office.

Through the Chotiner channel, we received only half-a-dozen stories, including the Justice Department's file on the tax investigation of George Wallace and his brother, Gerald. This was at a time when the White House feared the Alabama governor would run for President as an independent in 1972 and drain votes away from Nixon.

We always double-checked the White House leads and seldom gave the facts the emphasis Chotiner wanted. When we also started publishing Nixon scandals, the olive branch was withdrawn and the Chotiner leak dried up. But we learned that the White House still kept trying to plant stories with us indirectly. We have obtained the confidential White House file, for example, on Sen. George McGovern's campaign treasurer, Henry Kimelman. The file shows how the White House tried to slip us derogatory information about Kimelman.

On May 12, 1972, presidential aide W. Richard Howard wrote to a White House colleague, Fred Fielding, alleging that Kimelman "was nearly indicted last year because he is a liquor importer in the Virgin Islands and apparently he really rakes off the profits."

The allegation, it turned out later, was erroneous. But the memo continued: "We believe there must be material at Justice and Interior on this sleazy character that we would like to obtain through your fantastic sources."

"We could, of course, control the release of this material but need your help in getting what apparently is some pretty good stuff." The memo was stamped "Confidential-Eyes Only."

Not long afterward, the White House received a memo from Interior Secretary Rogers Morton's executive assistant, Bob Hitt. This one was stamped "Very Confidential-Eyes Only."

Hitt provided a rundown on Kimelman, telling about an investigation into alleged irregularities but concluding: "The investigation turned up nothing sinister that I am aware of."

By an interesting coincidence, we received a communication about this time from William N. Greer of the Virgin Islands. He enclosed a two-page summary of allegations against Kimelman, which we investigated but couldn't substantiate.

We were startled to find this letter in the White House's confidential Kimelman file. It was accompanied by a letter from Greer's wife to White House aide Harry Dent. "Enclosed herewith," wrote Nellie Greer, "is a copy of information sent by my husband to Jack Anderson."

We have learned that Greer, a former U.S. marshal, is a security specialist who does undercover work for commercial firms in the Virgin Islands. His wife in 1972 was a minor Republican appointee working in the Government House.

Reached in the Virgin Islands, Greer denied that the White House had instigated his letter to us. He had obtained the detailed accusations against Kimelman, said Greer, from local law enforcement agencies.

The Kimelman file shows that several Watergate figures — ex-Attorney General John Mitchell, ex-White House counsel John Dean, ex-presidential aide Charles Colson and a few others — tried to dig up dirt on Kimelman.

The results can be summed up in a June 5, 1972, memo from Dean to Howard. "To date," wrote Dean, "we have been unable to come up with any material on Kimelman that might be used to illustrate the true nature of the money man in McGovern's life."

ZIEGLER'S FISH: A year ago, we revealed that the National Aquarium was forced to spend 10 per cent of its meager budget to maintain fish tanks for senators, representatives and other pampered poobahs. Our story shortly put an end to the government's door-to-door guppy service.

There is, however, one lone fish fancier holding out. The President's press secretary, Ron Ziegler, has stubbornly refused to give up his Bleeding Heart Tetras.

Rumor has it that Ziegler gains great inspiration from his fish. He is about as communicative as his finny friends.

'Leaks' often used by Nixon administration

WASHINGTON — In this naughty city, where hypocrites come $100,000 a dozen, the Nixon administration has struck a new low in righteous indignation.

In a campaign to undermine the reputation of the House Judiciary Committee, the White House has launched a wide campaign of wails, moaning that congressmen seeking to impeach the President are hurting Mr. Nixon by leaking derogatory information about him.

Probably no administration in history ever made greater use of leaks — especially the poison leak — than the Nixon administration. So it is almost laughable that Nixon aides should now try to convince the American people that leaks are the bane of this society.

It was Richard M. Nixon who brought Charles Colson into the White House as a sort of special counsel for dirty leaks. They pushed Joseph Tydings out of the Senate with some vicious leaks during the 1970 campaign.

The burglarizing of the office of Daniel Ellsberg's psychiatrist was merely part of a Nixon administration plot to dig up something which could be leaked about Ellsberg so as to ruin his reputation. Colson, who is going to prison for his role in this affair, said President Nixon personally urged him on several occasions to disseminate information that would smear Ellsberg.

Sen. Robert Dole, R-Kan., probably becomes enraged even today when he recalls how he went to the White House and made a gentleman's agreement with the President to step down quietly as Republican national chairman — only to have top Nixon aides wound him by leaking to the press that Mr. Nixon had ousted Dole — almost before the senator could get outside the White House gates.

And Spiro Agnew? When President Nixon and his closest cronies decided to bounce the former vice president they picked him with a thousand stilettos — in the form of press leaks.

And this is the bunch now waging a sanctimonious campaign to convince the American people that leaking is a worse "crime" than bribery, burglary, perjury, obstruction of justice and all the other felonious behavior we've had in and around the White House in recent years.

The inescapable truth is that leaks are part of our system — in some cases, a mean and dirty part, in others, leaks are about the only way to let the American people have a voice in vital policy disputes.

Leaks are often used to "get" people, to force them to resign, to drive them out of town. I'll never forget Dean Rusk's reaction when a reporter wrote that President Kennedy was looking for a new secretary of state and Rusk learned the reported was one of Kennedy's closest friends. "Mr. Rowan," Rusk said, "Washington is a very wicked city."

Lyndon B. Johnson used to rant and rail about leaks, especially what he thought were "State Department leaks." He once shouted to a gathering of State Department officers: "You're just a bunch of little puppy dogs, stopping at every fire hydrant."

Yet, Lyndon Johnson was one of the most persistent leakers who ever occupied the presidency.

When differing factions in government are fighting over a policy issue of great public interest and importance, you can bet one side will use a leak to get its argument into the open. That often turns the tide in the bureaucratic battle.

As for the Judiciary Committee, it was foolhardy for chairman Peter Rodino or anyone else to think 33 congressmen would keep secret information so important to the nation — especially when some of those congressmen had made it clear at the outset that they were opposed to closed hearings.

But let the record be clear — Mr. Nixon's friends are leaking stuff they hope will help him with just as much zeal as his enemies are leaking data that makes him look bad. Until the hearings are wide open this nonsense will go on.

But the final impeachment issue must be decided on the evidence as to what President Nixon did or did not do — on testimony by men like Colson. The sermonizing about leaks is just another diversion, another dodge by people who themselves used to run an ugly, brutally sophisticated system of leaks.

What can columnist say new?

By TOM TIEDE
NEA Correspondent

Pearl Buck once told me that her most burdensome worry as a writer was "trying to say something which hasn't been said before." This dread is shared by many in the communications craft and as I contemplate the movement of my personal pen to Washington, where surely by now everything has been said, probably many times, I reflect on Buck's words with particular concern.

Tiede

Figurative speech is both lofty and low art in the Capital, and few have been the residents who haven't contributed. Abigail Adams observed that the natives of Washington "have too many high sounding words, and too few actions that correspond with them."

So citizens have learned, during two centuries of Washington whispers, to follow the advice of the early John Mitchell: judge us for what we do, not what we say.

I don't mean to demean the Republic here. True, I confess the opinion that the necktie of blind patriotism strangles clear thinking. I also agree with Karl Marx who wrote that government will do everything for the poor but get off their backs; but I side, too, with Marx's mother, who is said to have remarked of her son: "If Karl, instead of writing a lot about capital, had made a lot of it ... it would have been much better."

In short, I cherish America and its peculiarities, but I'm aligned first with the human condition; if we don't survive we don't do anything else.

As a Washington correspondent I intend to concentrate my efforts on reporting what government is doing to the people rather than for them.

President Nixon's communications chief, Ken Clawson, is currently issuing periodic propaganda proclamations in defense of his man — one concerns a report on how busy and involved the President is these days — but that kind of Madison Avenue claptrap will receive no airing by me. A President, after all, is supposed to be busy and involved. Never mind the smoke, let's see some fire.

If Clawson wants to win points for the chief, he can better do it by revealing Administration plans for curbing the 12 per cent inflation, changing the future for 5 million unemployed and restoring the lost confidence of much of the nation.

Not that I feel, understand, that either this or any President is entirely responsible for minimizing inflation, unemployment or citizen confidence. Frankly, I have no faith in purely political solutions to human dilemmas. I lost such naivete when I read, some years ago, that John Mitchell as Attorney General was quoted as warning:

"The conservation movement is a breeding ground of communists and other subversives. We (government) intend to clean them out, even if it means rounding up every bird watcher in the country."

So, sorry, I no longer feel American progress comes from its capital.

Neither do I believe, as do the newspaper columns on homemaking hints, that there is a solution to everything. No doubt, as one such column recently pointed out, the cure for hospital bedsores is to "tie false cups around the ankles and elbows," but no cute remedies exist for, say, the one of four aged Americans who live in poverty, degradation and very often unconscionable solitude.

As Albert Camus wrote, "Neither in the hearts of men nor the manners of society will there be a lasting peace until we outlaw death."

Many members of Congress know this philosophic truth but fail to admit it publicly; an example was when, two years ago, lawmakers "faced up" to the problem of highway carnage by putting buzzers on automobile seatbelts.

Yet for the puzzles that can be pieced together, it's clear to me the effort must be largely done by people rather than politicians. Dwight Eisenhower once said he felt that in the long run people would have to promote progress more than government and that "one of these days government had better get out of their way and let people have it."

Even now, though we are too close to see it clearly, the people are forming, from the rubble of political disgust, the nation and world of 10 or 100 years from now. A Washington reporter who wishes to record the revolution honestly should remove his rump from the capitol cloakroom and get out to the action; in this regard I expect to continue traveling my average of 100,000 miles a year, looking for people who are rocking the boat lest it sink in silence.

U.N. is seeking a lighter work load for translators

By EDITH M. LEDERER
Associated Press Writer

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) — The elite corps of United Nations interpreters is getting tongue-tied on the glut of words from the world's greatest debating club.

For 28 years, the silver tongues of the world's top linguists have been providing split-second interpretation into five languages.

These days, the tongues are getting a little tired.

"Things couldn't be worse," said Edith Macherez of France, for 15 years a U.N. interpreter. "The number of meetings is growing but not the number of interpreters. We're overworked and understaffed."

Simultaneous interpreting is ranked as one of the most demanding professions in the world.

"We're not dealing with just anybody," said Theodore Fagan, who joined the U.N. linguistic team when it was organized in 1946. "We're dealing with ministers, heads of state, diplomats. These are people of wide knowledge, so we require wide knowledge."

Being a good interpreter also requires the ability to speak before a microphone, to enunciate. Like actors, we're supposed to play the part. I follow the emotions of the speaker because very often you can put far more across with your voice."

In the linguistic world, U.N. interpreters are considered the "creme de la creme." As Fagan put it: "It's somewhat like the Metropolitan Opera. Once you've sung in the Met, you can sing anywhere."

Interpreters say they feel more like coffee dregs. They're sung out and suffering physically from long hours of "wall-to-wall meetings."

The 84 U.N. interpreters spend their working hours in 6-by-4-foot glass booths, earphones on their heads, concentrating on every spoken word so as not to miss a single nuance.

Their salaries range from $15,000 to $30,000 a year, with the average between $20,000 and $25,000.

"We're in those booths as long as a meeting runs, sometimes three hours, sometimes longer. How can an interpreter deliver first-rate, accurate interpretation for more than three hours?" Fagan asked.

"The strain is evident. The stress factor is one we've found no way to measure. Some people find themselves drinking water constantly. Some find their hands shaking."

"In my case, I lose my voice when I'm terribly, terribly tired out. Other people get headaches, backaches, insomnia."

U.N. officials generally agree with the interpreters' complaints. Bohdan Lewandowski of Poland, the under-secretary in charge of conference services, said:

"The only long-term solution to the problem is additional money and people. We tried but failed to get them at the last General Assembly, and we will try again at the next. Meanwhile, we are trying to make cuts in the schedule of meetings."

In the past, U.N. meetings had peaks and valleys which the interpreters say gave them time to recuperate. But with the growth of the United Nations, there are more peaks and fewer valleys now.

"There is a bewildering rapidity of change in this job," said Kingsley Shorter of Great Britain. "One morning you might be assigned to a politically sensitive session of the General Assembly. Then that afternoon, you might have to do a difficult technical session."

"You've got to be able to pick up easily on technical terminology. One minute you might be interpreting a complex point of law. The next, it might be the inner workings of a truck. If you're tired, you begin to lose the elasticity you need to bounce from one to the other."

The five working languages at the United Nations are English, French, Spanish, Russian and Chinese. At the next General Assembly session in September, Arabic will be added as a sixth official language.

Cards trim Bucs

ST. LOUIS (AP) — The St. Louis Cardinals are back atop the National League East but not without a struggle.

Manager Red Schoendienst shuffled 20 players, including six pitchers, into the lineup Tuesday night and watched a late rally tip the Pittsburgh Pirates 8-7.

So thin were Redbird ranks at the finish that left-hander John Curtis, a starting pitcher, finished in relief.

And Schoendienst, whose club moved a percentage point ahead of the Philadelphia Phils, admitted Sonny Siebert would have been next "If we'd gotten in any more trouble."

The 37-year-old Siebert, 7-4, is scheduled to pitch tonight as the Cards attempt to cap a four-game sweep of the fifth-place Bucs.

Pittsburgh Manager Danny Murtaugh, whose team has lost eight of nine to St. Louis, has nominated hard-luck left-hander Jim Rooker, 3-6, to try to become the stopper.

Curtis, 4-7 as a starter, and two eighth-inning hitters who failed to bunt were among key Cardinal figures Tuesday night.

"When they told Siebert to go down to the bullpen I told Red I felt good enough to go an inning," related Curtis, who volunteered for the relief.

"I'd been throwing about 20 minutes anyway ahead of my next start," he added. "I felt like I had a lot left and it ought to be out to use."

Curtis succeeded where four of five predecessors had failed and set the Pirates down on only Ed Kirkpatrick's single in the ninth.

Ahead of the respite a wild eighth inning included four Pirate runs for a 7-6 lead which was overcome by a Cardinal counter-attack.

Ken Reith led off the winning burst with his second single and Mike Tyson, after failing to sacrifice, doubled home pinch-runner Jack Heidemann.

Ted Sizemore was then also supposed to bunt but failed and singled on the infield setting up a winning hit by Lou Brock.

"That's one time when two bunt attempts failed and paid off," observed Cards Coach Vern Benson. "You never know in this game what's going to happen."

Attesting to the fact was Pittsburgh's Al Oliver, whose single and two doubles drove in four runs and produced the only Pirate lead.

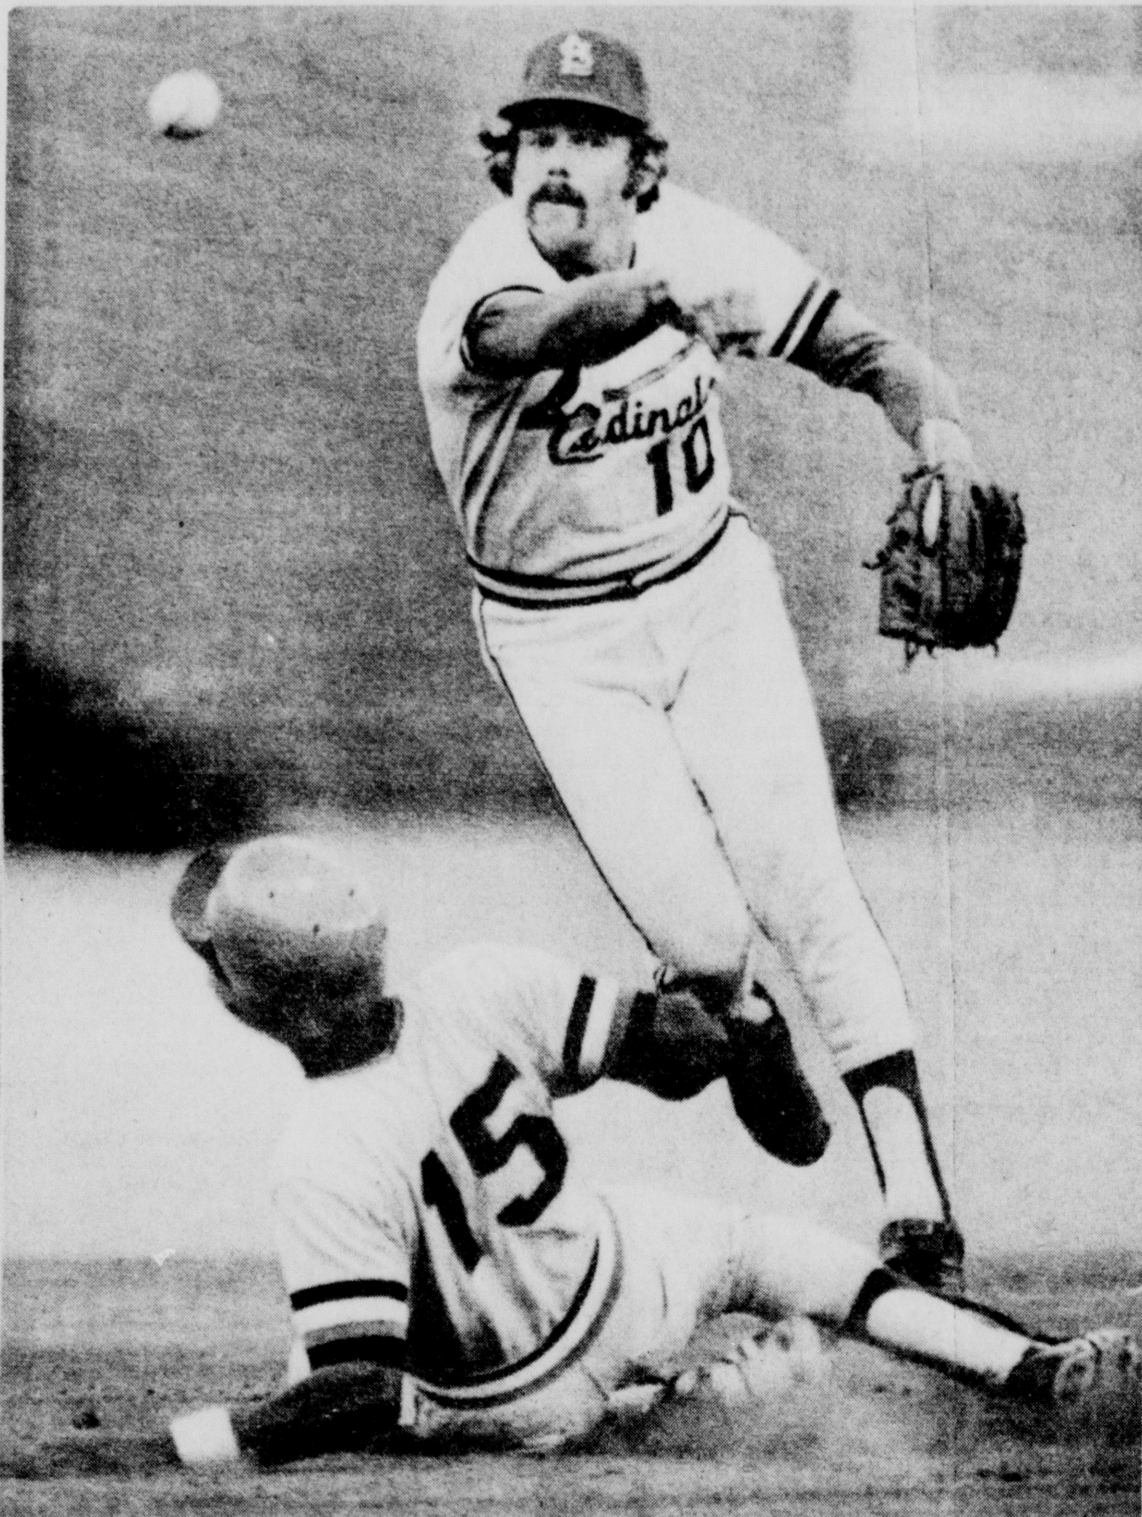

"It really hurts to lose a game like this after battling back," he conceded, "but the game's gone now. All we can do is try again tomorrow."

Gunmen steal Dodger receipts

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Three gunmen robbed an armored truck carrying tickets receipts in the parking lot at Dodger Stadium Tuesday night and escaped with $5,000 after firing one shot, police said.

Officers said no one was hurt. The truck, owned by the baseball team, was carrying three ticket sellers and the money to the stadium offices from a ticket booth when the robbers halted it.

The robbery occurred during a Dodgers-Atlanta Braves game.

Mowing down a pair

St. Louis' Mike Tyson fires the ball to first completing a double play as Pittsburgh Pirates' Gene Clines slides into second in the first inning of Tuesday's game in St. Louis. Pittsburgh's Richie Hebner hit the Cardinals' Tom Heintzelman to start the action. St. Louis won the game, 8-7.

NFL talks bog down

WASHINGTON (AP) — National Football League owners and players meet at the bargaining table again today in an effort to get some movement in their contract talks, something they haven't been able to do since the players' union made its demands last March 16.

After a six-hour, often-heated session Tuesday, federal mediator James Searce said he was trying to be optimistic, "but there are tremendous differences between the parties."

No compromise was reached during the meeting on any of the 63 demands made by the NFL Players Association, an indication there will be a strike next Monday.

John Thompson, executive director of the NFL Management Council, the owners' bargaining agent, said: "We're still optimistic that we can avoid trouble before it really counts—and that's early in July."

The San Diego Chargers open their training camp July 3, first of the 26 NFL teams to call their players together. The first game scheduled is the July 26 nationally televised exhibition between the Super Bowl champion Miami Dolphins and the College All-Stars in Chicago.

Tuesday's meeting between the two parties was the first since talks broke down June 13 in New York and was called by Searce. Another is scheduled for Thursday. The mediator said he would like to keep the two sides together through the weekend if there is any hope for resolution.

Thompson said the owners brought to Tuesday's meeting several new offers in the areas of insurance and pensions.

Bill Curry of Houston, union president, described the offers as "a 50 per cent decrease from what we got in 1970," considering inflation and other economic factors.

There was no discussion of the so-called "freedom issues," including the reserve and option clauses, the crux of the 63 items the union has demanded of management, although there were indications they might come up today.

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Manager Chuck Tanner of the Chicago White Sox was passing out the posies.

"Terry Forster is the best left-handed relief pitcher in the American League."

"Bucky Dent is the best young shortstop in the American League."

"Dick Allen is the best player in the American League."

The accolades came from Tanner after the White Sox nipped the slumping Kansas City Royals 10-9 in 12 innings Tuesday night. It was Chicago's second triumph in the three-game series which ends tonight.

Forster, Dent and Allen all had major roles in the victory although it was Bill Melton, who hit a home run during a four-run sixth inning, who drove in the winning run with a grounder in the 12th.

Forster, 4-5, made his second relief appearance in as many nights after a 10-day layoff because of a tender elbow. He pitched the final five innings, allowed four hits, two runs, walked three and struck out six.

"Forster needed work," said Tanner. "He proved one thing... that he's healthy. I made up my mind that last inning was the last one I was going to let him pitch. I didn't have any thoughts about taking him out in any of the other innings."

Bill Sharp opened the 12th with a single off reliever Joe Hoerner, 1-3, was safe at second when Tony Solaita fielded Ed Hermann's bunt and threw too late to second. Dent laid down what Tanner described as "a perfect bunt" that advanced both runners.

Melton's slow roller to shortstop Fred Patek scored Sharp.

Dent also had two singles, scored a run and drove in one in the 10th inning that gave the Sox a temporary 9-8 advantage.

"Dent's great," Tanner said again.

Allen connected for three hits, one a two-run homer in the third, his 17th of the season.

"Allen put one in orbit," Tanner grinned. "He's the quiet leader. He's the key to our ball club. I think we're as good as anybody."

Tanner also paid tribute to Melton, whose home run was his sixth, and Ken Henderson, whose two hits drove in four runs.

The Royals started off as if they were going to tear the White Sox to pieces, wiping out a 2-0 deficit with five runs in the first.

The first six Royals got hits, including a double by Hal McRae, who cracked a solo home run, his 10th, leading off the third and giving Kansas City a 6-4 lead.

Forster took over after McRae's no-out single in the eighth when the Royals tied the game at 8-8 but after that, he was tough.

"There was no pain in my elbow," Forster said. "It's a little stiff. When I get out there, it gets loose. It killed me to have to sit on the bench the last 10 days. I felt so strong I couldn't believe it."

Bob Pledge and Nolan Schubert continue to lead in the pitching and hitting statistics for the Sedalia Ban Johnson entry in the Central Missouri Ban Johnson League.

Pledge, a former Smith-Cotton hurler, has won both of his starts. He's given up only three hits in 15 innings. Even more impressive is his earned run average, which stands at 0.00. Pledge has walked only four and struck out 20.

Schubert, Sedalia's flashy shortstop from Knob Noster, leads or is tied for the lead in every hitting category.

Schubert leads the team in hitting among the regulars with a .363 mark, connecting on 12 of 33 attempts. His 33 appearances is the highest on the squad, as are his 12 hits. Schubert has driven in six runs and scored 14 runs himself.

Five of his 12 hits are doubles; he also is tied with C. L. Brownsberger for the lead in triples with one.

Right-hander Terry Hudson, who like Pledge played for Central Missouri State University this past season, has won all four of his decisions. In 32 innings he's allowed only six earned runs for an ERA of 1.69. Hudson has struck out 23, walked eight and been tagged for 27 hits.

Hudson is also second to Schubert in hitting with a .344 mark.

Sedalia's team hitting mark through the first eight games of the season is .260 (.66 for 253). Pledge, Hudson and Paul Kostopolus, Sedalia's three regular pitchers, have a combined earned run average of 2.61.

Boonville ace Dennis Sercu won his fifth game against no defeats this season when he picked up the 13-10 decision over Sedalia last week in Sedalia's belated CMBJ home opener in Liberty Park Stadium.

It was Sercu's 32nd victory of his Ban Johnson career.

Sercu is the winningest pitcher in the history of the CMBJ loop with a mark of 32-8.

Columbia's ace right-hander Ray Ash, was tagged with only the second loss of his career in Ban Johnson play last week, when Nick Finn hurled Jefferson City past Columbia, 8-4.

Ash, who was victorious through regular-season until Thursday's setback to Jefferson City, suffered his only other loss in Ban Johnson action to Boonville in last year's playoffs, when Boonville nudged Columbia for the CMBJ championship. To date, Ash has a 22-2 record in the league.

Turning to softball, it's worth noting that the lights have finally been moved back at Hubbard Park, and work is almost finished on the new outfield fence.

For nearly one and one-half seasons, the lights, which were initially installed for minor-league play in Little League Baseball, had been right in the middle of the outfield.

The fast-pitch and slow-pitch teams that use the Hubbard facility are grateful, I'm sure, of the changes, even if they were a long time coming.

For the first time this season, Steve Gerlecz, Sedalia, has moved his batting average above the .200 level.

Gerlecz, a former standout prep baseball and basketball star for Smith-Cotton High School and the son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank M. Gerlecz of 2511 West 11th, is in his second season of professional baseball.

In his busiest and most productive week of the season last week, Gerlecz batted .265, picking up nine hits in 34 trips to the plate. He drove in four RBI and scored four times.

His nine-for-34 performance for Charleston (Pirates) in the Western Carolinas League (Class-A) moved his season's average to .214.

Orange Bowl, NBC ink 3-year pact

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The National Broadcasting Co. announced Tuesday it has signed contracts to televise the Orange Bowl football game for three more years and National Collegiate Athletic Association has kethal championship playoffs through 1976.

The company did not disclose how much it agreed to pay for the television rights.

Carl Lindemann, NBC vice president for sports, made the announcements and also told a luncheon for affiliated station editors that the network telecast 360 hours of live sports programming in 1973.

Rosewall, Gorman win

Ms. King safely through opening round

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Chris Evert, the 19-year-old No. 2 seed from Fort Lauderdale, Fla., bids for one of 32 spots in the women's singles at Wimbledon today on a recipe of at least 10 hours sleep a night. That's the strategy for victory of Miss Evert's mother, Collette, as this fiesta of tennis enters its third day with many of the world's top players complaining of "too much" and "too little."

The stars say they are tired from an exhausting schedule of too much tennis and too little practice on fast grass courts. Despite the groans, there have been no major surprises. Billie Jean King, defending champion and top seed seeking a sixth title, opened the women's events Tuesday with a smooth 6-1, 6-1 victory Kathy May, 18, of California.

In the men's singles, veteran Ken Rosewall of Australia and Tom Gorman of Seattle are safely through to the third round.

Referee Mike Gibson said he hoped to get all remaining 10 men's seeds and five women's seeds through their second-round matches by the time play finished today.

"My girls must have rest," insisted Mrs. Evert, chaperoning daughters Chris, who has won the Italian and French championships so far this year, and 16-year-old Jeanne. "Ideally, it's at least 10 hours a night for a championship like Wimbledon, a good 10 hours."

But many other players are not so fortunate.

About one-third of the 128 contestants in the men's singles have been playing in the United States since early May, involved in World Team Tennis. WTT activities often involve the players in day-to-day traveling.

"I reckon all the WTT guys could be tired and in trouble," said Yugoslav Nikke Pilic. "They've been indoors, and most haven't had a five-set match on grass for 10 months."

Paradoxically, perhaps the greatest traveler of them all, Rosewall, is the player who has impressed most during the opening shots here.

Rosewall, 39, was the star of Tuesday's play when he beat rising Indian champion Vijay Amritraj 6-2, 5-7, 9-8, 6-1 in a classic second-round match of pinpoint accuracy and flashing skill.

Three-times runner-up at Wimbledon, Rosewall, would dearly love to win although he now is only a parttime player.

"I'm not going to be a push-over for anyone," said the dapper little Australian.

Cracklin' Rosie

Rosie Casals of the United States, who is seeded fourth in the women's singles division at Wimbledon, gets set to return the ball to England's Penny Moor, during their first-round match Tuesday. Rosie won the match in easy fashion, 6-2, 6-1. (UPI)

Big boost may come from TV

WFL ticket sales increase

By ANDY LIPPMAN
AP Sports Writer

Buying a World Football League season ticket is a little like buying a pigskin in a poke.

But with the July 10 starting date for the new league drawing nearer, the prospect that fans will end up holding an empty bag grows less.

And as the league gains credence, it also gains sales.

The Honolulu Hawaiians say they have sold nearly 7,000 season tickets and hope to boost the figure to 12,000-15,000.

The big sales boost could be the WFL's first appearance on television.

"Fans just want to see that we're for real," said Stu Zanville, the Hawaiians' administrative director. "They want to make sure we really exist before putting out any money."

Most of the 5,000 season tickets and about 80 per cent of the 16,000 tickets sold for the Detroit Wheels' first home game has come in the past three weeks "since we announced our schedule," said Brian Rekiel, team promotion manager.

He said about 70 per cent of season tickets have been sold to companies in blocks of four.

The Chicago Fire is stoking its publicity flame even before the season gets underway, in hopes of reaching 20,000 season ticket holders to fill the 55,700-seat Soldier Field.

"We're close to leading the league in ticket sales," said owner Tom Origer, who said he has spent between $1 million and $1.25 million so far in hopes of keeping losses to around $500,000. "We've done a pretty good job of organizing all the way around, so I think we'll lose maybe only half of the $1 million most of the other clubs may lose this season."

The Houston Texans also have hired a sales force. The result has been more than 4,000 season tickets and a "super" reception, say team officials.

Larry Hatfield, president of the California Sun, reports he is "pleasantly surprised" by the 17,511 season tickets sold through June 18, while officials of the Memphis Southmen report they are pleased by the 5,000 season tickets sold in four weeks.

The Jacksonville Sharks have had to cope with some of the league's early traumas; when the Florida Blazers moved to Orlando from Virginia, the

Norton gains 8th-round TKO victory over Kirkman

SEATTLE (AP) — Ken Norton, the fifth-ranked heavyweight who had tired Boone Kirkman flat on his back at the end of the seventh round, said part of his strategy was to get the Renton, Wash., fighter early and getting in some thudding body blows. But the 28-year-old

Tipton downs California

TIPTON — Tipton moved above the .500 level at home Tuesday night with a 13-8 victory over California in the lone Central Missouri Ban Johnson League game scheduled.

The victory was the fifth in nine decisions for Tipton and moved them to within one-half game of third-place Centralia in the league's Eastern Division race.

The game was called at the end of five and one-half innings, when California's Charles Johnson was ejected from the game.

California, which fell to 1-9 and buried itself deeper in the East cellar, had only nine players at the game and was forced to quit after Johnson's ejection.

Announce 9-day deer season

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — The state conservation commission announced Tuesday a nine-day deer season from Nov. 16-24, which will include various changes from the past.

One of the most significant changes, the commission said, will be the division of the east central area of Missouri into two management units. That division, which will increase the number of state management units from 10 to 11, is due to the fact that the east central area has portions with both too many and too few deer, the commission said.

There also will be a quota of 1,200 antlerless deer permits this fall, another change from the past. The commission said that change is intended to limit the harvest of those animals.

In addition, the commission said a primitive weapons hunt has been added to the list of special and managed deer hunts for this year.

The fight, which produced a record Seattle indoor gate, $98,335, started with Kirkman stalking the San Diego boxer

Secretariat, Riva Ridge meet minimum syndication standards

PARIS, Ky. (AP) — Thoroughbred Secretariat and Riva Ridge have each got 60 per cent of their mares in foal, assuring that their stud duty syndications totaling $11.08 million will stand, the Louisville Courier-Journal reports.

Seth Hancock, president of Claiborne Farm in the Kentucky Bluegrass, said in a copyrighted story in today's editions of the Louisville newspaper that Secretariat and Riva Ridge both have at least 22 mares in foal so far.

"They both have made their number," Hancock said. They both have got their 60 per cent. Now it's a question of whether it'll be 60, 70, 80 or 90 per cent."

Last February, revised syndication agreements called for Both horses completed their racing days at Mrs. Tweedy's Meadow Stable.

Riva Ridge won the 1972 Kentucky Derby and Belmont Stakes, and Secretariat in 1973 became the first horse in 25 years to win racing's Triple Crown, the Derby, Belmont and Preakness.

One of the general rules of play that everyone is taught is "Cover an honor with an honor."

Like all general rules you will do better if you follow it every time rather than never follow it. But you will do best if you learn when to follow it and when not to.

South wins the first club, or ducks and wins the continuation. It doesn't matter much. He has to lose two clubs and one diamond and success or failure depends on whether or not he loses a trump trick.

With eleven trumps the correct percentage play is to try to drop the king. It will work exactly 52 per cent of the time. So, all else being equal the expert will play for the drop.

However, all else doesn't have to be equal. Any good player will lead his jack of spades. If West has been taught to cover an honor with an honor on each and every occasion he will clatter up with the king and south will make his contract anyway.

If West sees that this is not the time to cover (it isn't) but goes into a huddle before ducking, South will finesse in the theory that West's huddle meant that he was thinking of covering.

However, if West just plays his six spot unconcernedly, South should rise with dummy's ace. After all, that is a 52 per cent chance. East will show out and another contract will bite the dust.

Colson theory documents buried by secrecy stamp

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Howard H. Baker Jr. says he has been trying for months to have the secrecy stamp lifted from documents on which Charles W. Colson apparently bases a theory of deep CIA involvement in Watergate and related cases.

"I doubt that this will become a dead issue," the Tennessee Republican said. "I don't expect it to."

Because the CIA refuses to declassify the documents, Baker said he cannot confirm or deny the accounts given Monday by a private investigator consulted by Colson last month.

The investigator, Richard L. Bast, said Colson told him President Nixon generally agrees with his theory of CIA conspiracy. Bast said Colson believes the CIA helped carry out the break-in at the office of Daniel Ellsberg's psychiatrist and that the agency knew in advance of the Watergate burglary plans.

Baker has written a report based on his CIA investigation that he had hoped could be included in the Watergate committee's final report, expected this week. But because the Baker study relies on documents the CIA classified secret it cannot be made public.

A source with access to the report said it draws no ultimate conclusions about intelligence community connections with Watergate or the cover-up but raises "significant new questions" that make it impossible to rule out such connections.

Colson, a former White House aide, said in a statement that he met twice with Bast and "we talked in a very offhand fashion, largely exploring theories for many of which I have been unable to obtain factual support."

He said the discussions were not for public consumption and while some of the statements were quoted accurately they "should not therefore be read into any other context."

According to Bast, Colson

based many of his statements on documents he was shown by Baker in the senator's home last year.

Baker, who has been trying to pursue a CIA-plot theory dropped by other investigators, said Colson "sat in my living room at my request and answered certain questions that were based on documents supplied us by the CIA. He said Colson 'was no source of anything.'"

Baker said, "I have been trying for months, in any way I can, to get that stuff declassified," but that his first request—now three months old—has not drawn a CIA response.

Colson said he consulted Bast last month "at a time when I was exploring whether he would be able to serve as a private investigator on behalf of myself and possibly other Watergate defendants." Three days after their May 31 meeting, Colson pleaded guilty to obstructing justice. He is scheduled to begin a one-to-three-year prison term July 8.

Missouri residents are given admission preference

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Officials of the University of Missouri-Kansas City law and dental schools have advised state legislators that Missouri residents receive preference for admission to their schools.

Deans H. B. G. Robinson of the dental school and Patrick D. Kelley of the law school told a special House appropriations subcommittee Tuesday the annual admissions to the two professional schools are composed mainly of state residents.

The subcommittee began its hearings into the admission procedures at state-supported professional schools after various legislators received complaints about out-of-state applicants being favored for admission to professional schools supported by state tax dollars.

"We're not on a witch hunt," said committee chairman Gene Copeland, D-New Madrid. "We're a fact-finding committee. We never want you to take a student that's not qualified, but we have to answer to those people, the people of Missouri."

Copeland said officials from the UMKC nursing and medical schools will also appear before the committee as well as those from the University of Missouri-Columbia's professional schools.

The majority of complaints about lack of preference for admission of qualified in-state applicants concerned the medical and law schools at Columbia, he said.

Robinson told the committee that more than 100 of the 160 students admitted each year to the dental school are from Missouri while Kelly pointed out that the admission requirements weighted in favor of the state residents have caused the

Sales tax is favored over levy

KANSAS CITY (AP) — The Kansas City Board of Education has voted to remove a $125 levy increase from the ballot in favor of a city sales tax increase providing certain conditions can be met.

By an 8-0 vote Tuesday the board said it will remove a proposed levy increase from the Aug. 6 ballot in favor of a sales tax hike to benefit education provided all school districts affected can agree on a distribution formula.

Another provision is that all other matters connected with the sales tax can be cleared up to the board's satisfaction by July 6.

The proposal for the sale tax increase must be approved by the City Council today if it is to appear on the Aug. 6 ballot. It requires a simple majority while a levy increase needs a two-thirds majority.

Last week the board voted to resubmit the levy increase which was defeated earlier this month.

annual admissions to the law school to include 85 per cent state residents.

Robinson also said that he has had a good relationship with both the governor and the state legislature, involving no pressure concerning the way the school is operating, and he commented, "I wish others were as understanding as the legislators."

Committee members lauded the dental school's practice of personally interviewing potential students before deciding whether to accept them, and

Utility hike controversy continues

KANSAS CITY (AP) — George Lehr, county executive, and Mayor Charles B. Wheeler have asked the president of the Kansas City Power & Light Co. to take a personal role in reaching a settlement in a rate increase the utility is seeking.

Lehr, with Wheeler's concurrence, made the request in a letter to Robert K. Zimmerman, and the company's attorney, Arthur J. Doyle, notified the city and county their proposal of a settlement of a $17 million increase was unsatisfactory.

The company originally sought a $21-million increase but later raised it to $27.6 million. The Public Service Commission granted the company a $23.6 million increase May 7, but a Jackson County Circuit Court judge overturned that order on grounds the PSC exceeded its authority.

The city and county and other interveners asked KCP&L to accept a compromise of $17 million—an increase termed justifiable by the commission.

The compromise was rejected by Doyle, who called it a "dis-service to the public."

Tuesday night, Zimmerman said while he had not seen Lehr's letter he had read Doyle's letter rejecting the compromise settlement and Doyle's statements represented company policy.

Records center fire protection moves included

ST. LOUIS (AP)—The installation of extensive fire protection equipment highlights a contract to rehabilitate the Military Personnel Records Center damaged by fire last July, officials said.

The nearly $5 million contract was awarded Tuesday to the Hilton Construction Co. of Brentwood, Mo.

Included in the plans are overhead sprinklers, firewalls and automatic fire doors dividing each floor into four compartments, the General Services Administration said.

After last year's blaze, fire officials strongly criticized the lack of fire protection devices in the building.

The sixth floor of the records center was destroyed in the fire, which burned for two days. The repair work does not include restoration of the sixth floor, but only improvements to the remaining five stories.

suggested that the UMKC law school institute a similar practice rather than relying on grades and test scores alone.

The committee, also concerned with the fact that in an effort to recruit minority students some more highly qualified non-minority students are turned away, asked for statistical information on applications and admissions to the law school.

The subcommittee will make its report to the House Appropriations Committee before December, Copeland said.

Although the Appropriations Committee has no direct control over admissions policies at the schools, he commented, "we appropriate money to operate these schools and we want to make sure that the taxpayers' money is not being mispent."

CIA wants penalties for publicizing secrets

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Central Intelligence Agency is seeking legislation authorizing criminal penalties against government employees who make intelligence secrets public, official sources say.

William E. Colby, director of the spy agency, has proposed amendments to the National Security Act of 1947, which also would clarify the government's ability to enjoin news media from disclosing material that might compromise the sources and methods of intelligence gathering, the sources said.

The criminal penalties, however, would not apply to the newsmen, the sources said. "This is not aimed at the media, but at people who decide on their own to disclose classified information. This would not allow the director to go after recipients of the information," one source said.

But the criminal provisions would apply to employees of firms with government contracts that gave them access to classified information, the sources said.

However, one source emphasized that before any prosecution could be brought, the director of the CIA would have to show to a judge that the classification was reasonable.

The sources stressed that Colby's proposal was being considered within the Nixon administration. No final decisions on its

Drop in farm exports add to trade deficit

WASHINGTON (AP) — A sharp drop in farm exports contributed to a U.S. trade deficit of $776.9 million in May, the Commerce Department reported Tuesday.

It was the biggest monthly trade deficit since October 1971 when it was $815 million. However, the nation still had a trade surplus for the first five months of 1974 of $1.5 billion.

Imports during May increased 3.3 per cent to $8.4 billion, while exports fell 7.3 per cent to $7.6 billion.

The decline in exports followed 20 consecutive months of increases and was due largely to a 17 per cent decline in exports of food and live animals.

The May value of exports of food and live animals was slightly more than $1 billion, down from nearly $1.3 billion in April and the lowest total since $978 million July of last year.

The cost of imported oil in May was four times higher than a year earlier, before the big increase in world oil prices.

I'm going to do something special to celebrate Missouri State Bank's birthday ...when I get around to it!
